That insidious disease, Scrofula, is the fruitful cause of innumerable complaints, Consumption being only one of many equally fatal. Eruptions, ulcers, sore eyes, glandular swellings, weak and wasted muscles, a capricious appetite, and the like, are pretty sure indieations of a scrofulous taint in the system. Many otherwise beautiful faces are disfigured by pimples, eruptions, and unsightly blotches, which arise from impure blood, showing the need of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to remedy the evil.

All sufferers from blood disorders should give Ayer's Sarsaparilla a fair trial,—avoiding all powders, ointments, and washes, and especially cheap and worthless compounds, which not only fail to effect a cure, but more frequently aggravate and confirm the diseases they aggravate and confirm the diseases they

It was a gloomy December day in the year

An east wind coming over the cold waters of the Atlantic, and a wide expanse of salt marshes, moaned through the pines and swept the sandy stretch where the little settlement of Savannah was just beginning to pull itself together.

The scene was not very attractive. A rude but strong stockade containing a number of shops and houses, the headquarters and bar-racks of the military and a few outlying cabins of the more adventurous pioneers-this was

In a comfortable room in the most preten-In a comfortable room in the most presentious building in the stockade, the headquarters of the commanding general, three gentlemen sat by a blazing wood fire. They were drinking Madeira, and their rubicund visages showed that they were not unaccustomed to this and even stronger beverages.

One of the three wore a scarlet uniform glittering with a profuse emblazonry of gold lace, but his large spare figure indicated great strength, and his face with its prominent Roman nose and brilliant eyes would have stamped the man in any circle as a remarkable person, a born leader of men.

This man, the central figure of the group, was General Oglethorpe.

The other two, dressed also in scarlet uniforms, were brother officers. One was Major Dalhousie, the other was Captain Cardigan. They were young men, but their appearance showed them to be gallant soldiers, well suited to the business in which their general kept them engaged night and day. The three officers had something more serious on hand than the discussion of their Ma-"The fellow will have to be shot, then," remarked Major Dalhousie airily, as he swallowed another bumper. "I am afraid so," replied Captain Cardigan, adjusting his ruffles, "but it is a pity. Corporal Crupp is a good soldier at times. Lord! But he can fight!"

"Zounds!" exclaimed the general, "much do I deplore such a necessity, gentlemen, but discipline is more important in these sayage wilds than it is in Europe. Here warfare is nothing but butchery, and we need every man in our small force. Now, when I was campaigning on the continent," continued the general, as he paused to drain another glass, "a little drunkenness, more or less, did not matter. I myself once refused to take a French officer prisoner because he was so befuddled that he ran into our lines. A splendid fellow he was, too. Once our commands were fronting each other just as the fight opened, and the Frenchman, taking off his hat, 'Gentlemen, will you have the goodness to fire

"That was grand!" cried Major Dalhousie. "It was," answered the general sententiously, "but it was not war. It was an attempt to apply the tactics of the ball room to the battle field. Well, my bull dogs accepted the invitation, and in less than five minutes we had driven the Monsieurs out of sight."
"But," said Major Dalhousie, "we are leavng the subject. Must the corporal be shot?" "To a certainty," murmured Captain Cardigan, who had spilled his wine, and was peering into his right boot under the impression that something was wrong somewhere. "Let us see," said the general, "you have had the varlet in the guardhouse?"

"A hundred times," replied the captain.
"Damme if I think he has ever left it," replied the major.

"And yet he fights?" "Like a devil," exclaimed both officers. "He saved us from a surprise a month ago," put in the major. "It is a serious case," said the general. "The trustees of our infant colony are determined to prohibit the drinking of rum, and all that is brought here has to be staved."

"Blood and death," interrupted the major, how does the fellow get his tipple?" "Tremenshus mishtery to me," said the cap-tain, who had just lost another glass of Madeira, and was glaring at the water pitcher very suspiciously.

"I think," suggested the general, "that I will have the corporal brought here. I desire to question him."

As the officers made no objection, a messenger was sent to the guardhouse, and in a few moments the offender came in, escorted by a Corporal Crupp looked a little the worse for wear, and his face wore a surly expression, but he did not appear to be vicious. He faced the three officers quietly and waited for them to speak.

"Corporal, we have lost all patience with you," said General Oglethorpe sternly. "I am not surprised," was the sad reply, 'and I am ready to stand the consequence "You'fell asleep while drunk on your post."

"It is true." admitted the soldier "Yesh, corp'l, and you'll have to be shot," interposed Captain Cardigan.

"I have no objection," answered the corporal stolidly. 'See here, corporal," said [the general severely, "You are a man of intelligence. You know all about the prohibitory order of the trustees. Now, why is it that you will smuggle rum, and drink it?"

For a moment the corporal was silent. Then he straightened himself to his full height and pointed to the table and the half filled

"There," he said, in a steady ringing voice, "there is the explanation. You place yourselves above the law. Do you not see others will be tempted to do the same? When Corporal Crupp breasts the cold and wet, and sees his superior officers enjoying their wine, don't you think that he feels driven by some demon to go and follow their example? Like master, like man, you know.'

'Impudent knave!" yelled the major. "Gad! If he was a gentleman, I'd call im out," said the captain. The commander rose from his chair and Then he faced the culprit, and said: "In your coarse, blunt way, corporal, you have taught me a lesson. I don't know that it is possible to save you, but you shall have another chance." He summoned a servant.

"Go and empty every drop for wine and spirits in the house!" he ordered. The officers jumped from their seats in sur-

"I mean it," said the general. "There will be no more tippling among her majesty's offi-cers in this colony, and the first man who disobeys this rule will find himself in the guard

"But-," stammered the captain. "I have said it," was the firm reply. "Now, Crupp, I want you to go to the Indian village twenty miles north of here, and return with a report of the war-like preparations there."
"General, will you trust me?" cried the sol-lot of your fellow soldiers."

The corporal stepped forward and kissed the general's hand, and dropped a tear on it.

Then with a salute he retired.

Corporal Crupp accomplished his mission He did more. He became the best soldier in the colony, and in the course of the war with the Spaniards rose to the rank of cap-

When General Oglethrope returned to Europe Captain Crupp accompanied him. Long years afterwards Colonel Crupp was in the habit of entertaining young officers with reminiscences of General Oglethorpe. "Ah, he was a man!" he would say, "And he knew men, too. That, gentlemen, is the great secret of leadership and command!"

CANALING THE ISTHMUS.

An Interesting Article on the Subject From Major Sidney Root.

From time to time THE CONSTITUTION has noticed the progress of the work of that remarkable man—DeLesseps, who for some ten years has had before the public his plans for cutting through the Cordilleras, a tide watership canal, on which during the last few years, the enormous sum of $135,000,000 has been expended.

the enormous sum of $135,000,000 has been expended.

The last number of Harper's Weekly has an article on the subject, which all thoughtful Americans should read, as well as the article in the Forum of November.

It chanced that, during my twelve years residence in New York after the war, Mr. T. M. Kelly was one of my nearest friends. He had spent about $150,000 on the four exploring expeditions which he had sent down to survey the Darien Isthmus. Hence my office became a sort of a rendezvous of the people engaged in the work, as General Totten, Lane, Rude and others, and I naturally became interested in the great work, which ought to interest all Americans.

This is my apology for asking the use of your columns.

This is my apology for asking the use of your columns.

To save the tedious and dangerous navigation around Cape Horn, the Spanish government caused surveys to be made as early as 1550, looking for a practicable water route, which would save 12,000 miles of slow and difficult navigation, to reach the north Pacific.

From 1550, to the present time, surveys and explorations have been almosticontinuous. The acquisition of California by the United States, and the enormous development the commerce of the Pacific, makes the subject one of the gravest importance to this couniry, not only for economical reasons, but for the protection of our Pacific coasts and commerce in case of of our Pacific coasts and commerce in case of war. That this has been fully realized by our government, is shown by the numerous, well equippted, surveying expeditions it has sent to Central America—the reports of which are in my office.

The objections to a direct tide water canal across the isthmus, are:

1st. The extremely unhealthly climate, which is demonstrated by the frightful fatality among the laborers who built the railroad, and are now digging the canal.

2d. The light and baffling winds known as the delayers. "evening tedions and costly the delayers."

2d. The light and baffling winds known as "the doldrums," causing tedious and costly delays and damage to cargo in a tropical climate—as wheat and provisions in salling vessels, which still conduct the larger part of the long voyage commerce of the world.

3d. The prodigious rain fall during eight months, and excessive droughts during four. Mr. Rude told me that a small steamer used in his explorations, had been securely tied in the evening, while the party slept in a house on shore. In the night the rain fell, and the next morning his steamer was found miles away, in the woods forty feet above the river! The railroad from Aspinwall to Panama reqired very costly engineering to protect it from the destructive floods of the Chagres river. Mr. Kelly, indeed, thought it cheaper and safer to blast out a tunnel 150 feet high, 80 feet wide and 2½ miles long, which his enginand safer to bast out a tanner loo feet migh, so feet wide and 2½ miles long, which his engineers recommended. The estimated cost of his canal via the Atrato and Truando rivers and the intervening tunnel, was $135,000,000. Mr. Kelly's franchise expired before the work was begun.

M. Lesseps' great work has been in progress.

It has already cost about a for several years. It has already cost about as much as the original estimates for the finished canal, and is not one-fourth done. The dis-tinguished head of the enterprise evidently uncanal and is not one-fourt done. The distinguished head of the enterprise evidently underestimated the difficulties mentioned above, and has several times modified his plans and increased his estimates. I understand that he proposes to overcome the dangers of the Chagres river by boring a very large and costly tunnel, through which the great volume of storm water is to be discharged into an adjoining stream. M. Lesseps has from the first steadily insisted upon a canal without locks. As to the serious results to the climate and prosperity of the world—the possible deflection of the Gulf stream, or the probable irraption of waters of the Pacific, scientific men differ. Many accomplished men, as Dr. Pinckney, of Atlanta, think the result would be disastrous. However, late cable advices tell us that Lesseps has changed his plans and will introduce locks, which will increase the cost four or five millions.

locks, which will increase the cost four or five millions.

These locks must be supplied with water from the Chagres river, which is nearly dry frathere months of the year. Of course, money can do almost anything, but I confess that I am unable to see how M. Lesseps can get through without the powerful aid of his government, which would cause international troubles of the most dangerous character.

It is, therefore, probable that De Lesseps's scheme will fail, to the regret of the commercial world and of his faithful adherents. There remains two routes which I believe are practicable, viz.: The plan of that great man, Eads, for a ship railway across the isthmus of Thehantepec, in Mexico, for, which charters have been obtained from that government. I have no doubt, from the drawings I have seen, that this can be done. All the world is familiar with the inexpensive marine railways, by which ship is harded up and tenging it.

that this can be done. All the world is familiar with the inexpensive marine railways, by which a ship is hauled up and repaired "on the ways," often remaining out of the water for several days. This is the principle, on a large scale, of Eads's ship railway. Owing to the untimely death of the distinguished originator of this scheme the work has been delayed, though it is understood that a strong convent exits which will 'carry the work

The route through Nicaragua has attracted attention since Lord Nelson, in 1779, seized the mout of San Juan river, which was supposed to control that continent. This place known as the Belize is still under the British flag. Owing to the wars with Napoleon nothing was done.
The promulgation of the 'Monroe doctrine' caused indefinite delay. It chanced that Louis Napoleon, while confined in the castle of Ham, published an exhaustive monograph showing the advantages of the Nigaraguan route, and unsuccessful efforts were made for his release to take charge of that enterprise.
Recently careful surveys have been made by an experienced engineer, Nicuocal, which shortens the distance and reduces the cost to about $50,000,000. This route was strongly indorsed by President Grant, from the advice of Admiral Aman. A strong company has been organized under the concessions of (Nicaragua and Costa Rica, and last month an expensively equipped expedition has sailed from New York to verify and elaborate previous surveys.
In this enterprise no governmental aid is re quired, other than the concissions mentioned above. Now then, under the very serious complications threatened by the imminent occupaquired, other than the concissions mentioned above. Now then, under the very serious complications threatened by the imminent occupation of the Isthmus of Panama by the French government, is it not wise for the American people to concentrate their energies upon purely American enterprises, as the Eads Ship railway, or the canal via Nicaragua, neither of which will cost over $50,000,000 or $60,000,000, and be under American control, while deLesseps canal, under foreign control, must cost at least $600,000,000.

In writing this much I beg to say I have no possible personal interest in any of the plans. I write only as a citizen of Georgia, who is interested in the welfare of the whole country, and to answer questions which are frequently asked.

and to answer questions which are fre Atlanta, Ga., December 10, 1887.

Lung Troubles and Wasting Diseases can be cured, if properly treated in time as shown by the following statement from D. C. FREEMAN, Sydney: "Having been a great sufferer from pulmonary attacks, and gradually wasting away for the past two years, it affords me pleasure to testify that Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Lime and Soda has given me great relief, and I cheerfully recommend it to all suffering in a similar way to myself. In addition, I would say that it is very pleasant to take."

Chronic Catarrh

Cannot be cured by local applications. It is a constitutional disease and requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Earsaparilla, which, working through the blood, eradicates the impurity which causes and promotes the disease, and soon effects a permanent cure. At the same time Hood's Earsaparilla builds up the whole system, and makes you feel renewed in strength and health. Be sure to get Hood's.

"I have used Hood's Earsaparilla for catarrh with very satisfactory resalts. I received more permanent benefit from it than from any other emedy." M. E. READ, Wauseon, Ohio.

"I suffered severely from chronic eatarhus ing from impure blood. It became very bad, causing soreness of the bronchial tubes and a troublesome cough, which gave great auxiety to my friends and myself, as two brothers died from two fronchial consumption. I tried many medicines, lut received no benefit. I was at last induced to try Hood's Earsaparilla, and I am not the same man in health or feelings. My catarrh is cured, my throat is entirely well, and a dyspepsia trouble, with sick headache, have all disappeared." E. M. LINCOLN, 35 Chambers st., Boston.

Try the peculiar medicine.

Dangerous Tendencies

Characterize catarrh. The foul matter dropping into the bronchial tubes or lungs, may bring on bronchitis or consumption, which reaps an immense harvest of deaths annually. Hence the necessity of giving catarrh immediate attention. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla before it is too late.

"I have been troubled with that annoying disease, nasal catarrh, and have taken all kinds of blood purifiers, but never found relief till I used Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I am confident will do all that is claimed. Hurah for Hood's arsaparilla."

J. L. ROUTT, Marksbdrg, Ky.

"For several years I have been troubled with that terribly disagreeable disease, catarrh. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla with the very best results. It cured me of that continued dropping in my throat, and studed up feeling. It has also helped my mother, who has taken it for run down state of health and kidney trouble. I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all as a good medicine," Mrs. S. D. Hearth, Puttern Conn. HEATH, Putnam, Conn. "Hood's Sersaparilla cured me of catarrh, soreness of the bronchial tubes, and terrible headache."
R. Giebons, Hamilton, Ohio.

BEWARE IMITATIONS.

An Abstract from the Work on Pulmonary Diseases Published by Prof. Prosper de Pietra Santa, of Paris.

"For some years Johann Hoff, of Berlin, has manufactured a liquid malt extract which the medical profession have used with such beneficial results, because of its great dietetic properties. This malt extract has remarkable nutritious action, both tonic and refreshant, and has proved to b of great value in chronic diseases, producing a contraction of the muscles of the digestive organs. As an aid to digestion it is wonderful in building up lost power. The great practitioners of Paris-Blache, Barth, Gueneau de Mussy, Pidaux, Fauvel, Empis, Danet, Robert de Latour, Bouchut, Piorry and Fardien-highly recommend this pleasant remedy in restoring weakened digestion. My persons experience leads me to confirm the praise which Prof. Laveau expresses in the following words: As a large number of patients lack the necessary power to digest solid food, and would through the use of stimulants be merely excited and weakened, therefore I regard it of immense value to the practitioner to bring to his aid a nutritious tonic and remedy like the Genuine Johann Hoff's Mait Extract, which will act not only as a tonic, but as a nutrient as well, and which is less exciting than wing

DR. LAMB'S LETTER.

MESSES, EISNER & MENDELSON: I have used Johann Hoff's Mait Extract for the past five years tal my private practice, and have found it to be the best Health Restoring Beverage and Tonic Nutritive known. I have found it especially good in persons convalescing from fever, in cases of dyspepsia for mothers nursing and in cases of weakly children, and also in lung troubles. My attention was drawn by the immense importation semi-monthly, and about a million of bottles imported by you have passed my inspection in the Custom-House satisfactorily for the past five years. Yours respectfully, W. W. LAMB, M. D.,

IN A TIDAL WAVE.

A Desperate Struggle for Life on the Peruvian Coast.

AN AMERICAN GIRL ASTONISHES THE Society of Lima-Overtaken by an Earthover the Bared Sea's Bed by a Tidal Wave.

When Henry Meiggs was the virtual mon-arch of Peru, that beautiful Pacific shere was hive for the ventursome spirits of the world.

Americans went to the "west coast," as it was niliarly called, to assist the daring, the rising, ret reckless young republic to become the queen state of those remote seas. It was a period of great but fictitious prosperity, and thither in my young life I went, wafted by forlune, but not to seek its material blessings in whose chief was to become an important offi-per of the great public works then projected to unite the two oceans by the rail across the travel to Europe by way of the Amazon.

brepressible mermaid. So it was a rare day that I did not seek the water. We had a pretby little cottage at Chorillos, the watering place of Lima, distant about eight miles. It bears the same relation to the capital that Pomperi did to ancient Rome, that Newport oes to New York and Atlantic City to Philadelphia. In expressive parlance, everything and everybody was swell. The rigid etiquette of transplanted Spain was the social tyrant and the duenna of Cervantes, and Le Sage was car-In blood and that of the aborigines commingled in the same veins. Funny, too, to the merican eye was this South American aristocracy reigning in the republic built upon cracy reigning in the republic built upon guano foundations. An American girl could not readily assimilate with the iron rules laid down by those who sought to build up a high and mighty arbitrary system by which to regulate the entree of all into the charmed circle. refore, to myself, I issued a declaration of spendence, particularly in the natatorial ction, for it was not then considered en e for a high-bred lady to be a bold swimone to disport herself in the breakers, and the attention of the sallow hidalgos and the shore when the

One morning I rode my favorite donkey down to the beach, donned my bathing suit and rushed from my bathing house with the zest of an anleased hound. Never before was I higher in spirits—never on that beach had I felt a supremer compliment to me in this particular art in which I had been told I had attained a perfection which had made the Limanian ladies look on with envious disdain, because, as I was about to run for a headions? because, as I was about to run for a headlong spring into the deep surf from an elastic plank, the president of the republic and his suite, waved a courtly recognition and encouragement, all saying in chorus: "Brava! brava!" My water pranks that morning were numerous and ambitious. So to speak, my entire admitteral interpretation of this phrase was not behind the natatorial gymnastics, for while my amateur exhibition was being watched by the ruler of Peru and his ministers I did what is known in our clime as the "treading" act, opening with my shrillest notes in the clear morning air undisturbed by single sound save the monotonous moan of gle sound save the monotonous moan of

With the lofty snow-capped peaks of the An-les rising abruptly almost from the shore to a height of over 10,000 feet and more for a soundly disposed and tuneful mermaid from the north could make those Pacific canons ring, as I cercould make those Pacific canons ring, as I certainly did on that eventful morning many years ago, and yet on that partiular day the sun was not bright, but an ominous gloom was in the sky. A heavy cloud hung over Lima, Chorillos and the sea. The Andes were spectreless. The ice and snow at the summits did not, as usual, rise as burnished spires. The day was simply bald. But this atmospheric change—for it was solely that—came suddenly and was an ominous presage. That I knew and felt when I was a few hundred yards from shore, when as by a flash a dark pall shot across the entire vault of the heavens, and then I was alone to seaward with a hundred voices shoutalone to seaward with a hundred voices shout "Senorita! Senorita! Tremblores (earth-

What should I do? Had I not seen the awful destruction wrought by the second chapter of the earthquake—the tidal wave—the sweep-ing away of ancient cities, the littered sea with hundreds of human bodies afloat after the hundreds of human bodies affort after the mysterious convulsion, so often a visitor of the tropies, the waters beating against the rocky walls of the Cordileras; and was I, too, to be dashed against that remorseless barrier?

The sea subsided to a perfect stillness, an intense darkness overspread all at the very moment of noonday, and all that inspired me with a knowledge that the cart have inhabited.

with a knowledge that the earth was inhabited at all were the frequent cries from the beach: "Make haste! make haste! For God's sake, make haste?" Then came the sickening, indeed, almost overpowering, odor of the sul-phuretted water, the myriad bubbles filled with the navious subtorrance, gasser isjung around the noxious subterranean gasses rising around me, a consciousness of being swiftly borne away from the liand and the awful contemplation of certain death. Now I was beyond the reach of human voices, and Byron's "Darkness," became a graphic reality.

IN THE ARMS OF THE TIDAL WAVE.

As everybody, called to face what seems in-

As everybody called to face what seems in-evitable death declares, the period of suspense self flat on the bottom of the ocean. I realized my opportunity, knowing that a return eddy had caught me at a favorable moment and saved me from the surface of the receding waters. Gone they had, miles away, to gather force and material for the monster tidal wave, twenty feet of perpendicular height, which was shortly to be hurled against the western coast of South America, destroying hundreds of lives and millions of dollars of public and private property. Then it was that the proverb of the Spaniards—a race so rich in telling aphorisms—came to mind: "El corazon the proverb of the Spaniards—a race so rich in telling aphorisms—came to mind: "El corazon malina las carnes" (The heart picks up the body.) So I picked 'myself up without ado and began to make my way over the 'slimy bould-ers, the soft mud and afterward the pebbly bottom. It was a race for life a race between bottom. It was a race for life, a race between my bare feet and agile extremities and the lordly tidal wave, whose loud roar I could hear behind me. There was little light to guide my foot-stens that morning. Often I was knee deep in mud, and then I would tumble over on some elimetry work and again warm from a show a show the sum of the sum o slippery rock, and again, weary from exhaus-tion, I would pause for breath. Yet still loud-er the roar! At last I found a firm footing on er the roar! At last I found a firm footing on the hard beach, but not before the avant-courier of the majestie wall from the sea was at my feet with a few inches of water. I stood up and faced the aquatic giant defiantly. But it was too late. My only safety remained in my lying flat with my face downwards and awaiting its coming with composure and trust in God. All the beach spectators had fled precipitately and I was alone. Speculation, however, was only for a moment. Suddenly lifted by the wave not yet full in its ripeness, I was deposited in the flower plot of a neighboring cottage to our own, and within another minute deposited in the flower plot of a neighboring cottage to our own, and within another minute was safely housed in the wine cellar of that was safely housed in the wine ceilar of that mansion, where champagne was quaffed, with the entire family gathered there, while the very roof was torn from the house and its upper apartments deluged with water. The celar, expressly built for such an occasion, was securely battened down, and but little wet percolated through the crevices. In a few moments all was over, and we had only to count up the ruin.

Further personal narrative seems unnecessary, but it may perhaps be added that the haughty Senoras of the exclusive Peruvian circles gave a handsome fete in honor of the circles gave a handsome fete in honor of the northern mermaid, and that thereafter their daughters were taught the art of swimming by competent professors.

But the coming to life! If I ever freeze to death again I'll leave word some way that the man who resuscitates me does so at his peril.

"That was a great winter, that winter of '39 and '40. And the fall of '39 wasn't so common, either. Neither was the spring of '40. I'll tell you why. The first snow of the season fell on October 3, '39. The last snow came down on May 16 in '40. Between these two dates there wasn't less than six feet of snow on the level all the time, and where the wind had good chance at it twenty feet wasn't anything uncommon. We had sleighing for over eight months, and the thermometer for five months was at no time higher than twenty months was at no time higher than twenty above zero, while the most of the time it sported fifteen degrees and twenty degrees below. This memorable fall, winter and spring I am speaking of may not have been so memorable in this part of the country. It was in New England where I experiment at the country. memorable in this part of the country. It was in New England where I encountered them, and especially in Maine, where I then lived. If they were as memorable as that hereabout, maybe some of you will recollect them.

In February, 1840, I had an interest in some lumber way up in the Piscataquis region, and I had to go up there and see how things were getting along. It was a long journey, but the

I had to go up there and see how things were getting along. It was a long journey, but the sleighing was like glass, and I had one of the best horses that ever stood inside the thills. On my second day out the thermometer stood at 20° below, and was inclined to go lower. I knew I would reach one of those queer little villiages common to the Maine backwoods early in the evening. There I intended to stay all night, and drive on next morning to the house of the agent of the lumber property, twelve miles further along, I reached the village, and found that there was no tavern there. Accommodations were offered me at a private ecommodations were offered me at a private ouse, but I was informed that I could not ob

There had been no rain since winter set in, and there wasn't a well nor a spring anywhere in the region in which there was a drop of water. The nearest water was in the Piscataquis river, two miles away, to which the few stock in the village were driven every day to drink, and enough water was brought back in buckets to keep the wants of the villagers supplied.

"This, of course, upset my plans. My horse was badly in need of water, and I couldn't think of letting him go all night without a drink. So I ate supper in the village and started on, intending to water my horse at the river and proceed to the agent's the same night. It was a starlight night, but the air was filled with that peculiar frozen mist frequently noticeable on very cold nights. As we neared the river this haze became denser, until finally it was with difficulty I could see anything ahead of me. It was like passing through a storm of scaly ice. Suddenly, as I was thinking that we must be almost on the margin of the river, there came a cracking sound, a loud splash of water, and the next second my horse was floundering about in water, which also covered the sleigh, the robes and myself up to my waist. In that thick bank of icy mist the horse had plunged into the river below where we had been told to cross, and had broken through the thin ice that had formed since the ice had been cut away that evening for the purpose of allowing the village cattle to drink. The water splashed about by the horse soon drenched the rest of me, and in less time than I can tell it I was coated with a rapidly thickening armor of loe. I guess my noble beast must have floundered at least a minute in that hole before he knew exacetly what had happened. When the situation did come to him he became quiet, threw his fore feet up, and lodged them both in the ice with a concerted bl

Captain Zeby's Wonderful Ride in the Hard Winter of '39 and '40.

From the New York Sun.

"Whenever cold weather begins to approach," says Captain R. L. Nobody was ever frozen any deader than I was, but I had the luck to be called back to life. And that coming back over the boundary makes me ache yet to think of it! I didn't mind the dying. That was rather a pleasure. But the coming to life! If I ever freeze to death again I'll leave word some way that the talthough one danger was escaped, a three casing of the pounded the ice ahead of him with his powerful fore feet, and again the ice yielded. During all this time I was shouting for help. I might, at the first break, have turned and leaped back to shore, but had not collected myself in time. It was now too late, and even if it had not been, I was so stiffened by the casing of ice that I couldn't have moved to save myself from death. The horse kept on, and, strange as the story seems, broke a channel for fifty feet across that river, and drew side. And he didn't tarry when he got there, but started at the top of his speed toward our destination. He soon struck the road and away we went. I knew that although one danger was escaped, a struck the road and away we well. I have that although one danger was escaped, a greater was before us, and I urged the horse on with my voice. made him stand out, even in that frozen mist, like a spectre horse. I could not move even my hands. We were not yet half way to the agent's house when I found myself growing drowsy. I could no longer use my voice. The elatter of the horse's hoofs and the cracking of the runners on the ice sounded to me like thunder claps and wierd hideous cries. I knew that I was freezen but I labored hard to rouse my will and cries. I knew that I was freezing, but I labored hard to rouse my will and fight with it against my fate. The stars looked like great coals of fire, although before they could be seen but dimly through the peculiar haze. pricking or a minimal heedees assauted my fiesh. Torturing me at that spot a moment, until I writhed in agony, it dashed quickly up my leg, stopped an instant, as if gloating in any misery, and then crawled with that awful pain slowly upward, until it seemed that tiny jets of the fiercest fiame were being blown into my body, heart, and brain. The intensity of this agony was not constant. If it had been I would have died again in a short time. It came in waves, so to speak. Each wave was a little less furious than its predecessor, until at last the storm was passed, and I found myself a weak, speechless, limp, and halpless mortal, lying on a robe before the fireplace of my friend, the agent. He had brought me back to life, but, as true as I tell you, I did not feel it in my heart to thank him.

"When I was strong enough to hear it, he told me that he was awakened in the night by the peculiar and loud neighing of a horse. He looked out of the window and saw a sight that startled him—a ghostly horse and sleigh and driver in the road before his door. He recovered himself and went down. Then he discovered that the driver was dead. He quickly carried the driver into the house, laid him on the floor before the fireplace and recognized me. Knowing that even if I was not beyond all aid, nothing could be done for me until the robe and clothing were thawed, he made the fire blaze and hurried to the rescue of the faithful and intelligent horse that had reasoned with itself that it must stop at the first house it came to on that terrible night, and that life and death depended on it. By the time the horse was cared for I was in shape to be resuscitated in case any such thing could be done. I was stripped and rubbed briskly with snow and snow water for more than an hour before I gave any evidence that I might be done. I was stripped and rubbed briskly with snow and snow water for more than an hour before I gave any evidence that I might be called back. Then another hour was spent in the same treatment, when a spoonful of brandy was poured down my throat. After that the circulation was started, and my agony began. That suffering lasted for an hour, and—well, I can say this; Freeze to death if you want. You'll like it. But don't let anybody fetch you to again."

M. SADI-CARNOT'S ANCESTRY.

The Story of His Grandfather, the "Organizer of Victory."

As Napoleon III. became president of the As Napoleon III. became president of the republic and emperor of France, not so much on account of his own personal abilities and deeds, as for the reason that he was "the nephew of his uncle," so Sadi-Carnot has just been elected president of the French republic, not so much for what he has done himself as for the reason that he is the grandson of his grandfather. Modern France is poor in great men living, but has an abundance of men bearing the names of the truly great of a past generation.

generation. One of these, a man of genius, was Lazarus Nicholas Marguerite Carnot, the "organizer of victory" of the first French republic. He was 38 years old when elected a member of the national assembly in 1791, in which body he raptional assembly in 1791, in which body he rapidly achieved distinction through the extreme scope of his revolutionary fanaticism. He proposed the confiscation of the property of the church and nobility, and the destruction of all the feudal castles, and voted for the execution of the king. But not until he took hold of the direction of the army did his genius fully dedirection of the army did his genius fully clare itself. His call upon the masses of the people to enlist was the first step toward the modern universal obligation to military ser-

The first army thus formed from the ranks The first army thus formed from the ranks of the people Carnot led in person against the Austrians and achieved some substantial successes at Wattignies in 1793. He directed the movements of Pichegru and Jourdan in 1794 and 1795, and continued to be the moving spirit in all the subsequent military successes of the republic.

Through him Napoleon was appointed general in chief of the Italian army. But when Napoleon, after his successes, was elected consult for life, Carnot, true to his republican principles, thenceforth opposed him to the last. Soon after Napoleon's assumption of the imperial crown Carnot withdrew from public life altogether. After the Russian campaign, however, when he believed France in danger, he came forward again and offered Napoleon his ever, when he believed France in danger, he came forward again and offered Napoleon his services. He was appointed governor of Antwerp and held the city until after the downfall of Napoleon. After the restoration of the Bourbon king he continued true to the antiroyalist party but soon left France and lived in exile at Magdeburg until his death in 1823.

Napoleon I., with his unrivaled insight into the character and value of men, said of Carnot "he was a 'silly' fellow, and easily duped," and Carnot confirmed the estimate of his silly egotism by pretending to be the savior of his country, by directing to have the single word "Carnot" inscribed upon his tombstone, and saying that "France would look upon his grave as a place of pilgrimage." The French do not go so far as that, but they really consider Carnot the most adorable, though not the most glorious, hero of the revolution.

The following anecdote, by no means of historical authenticity, nevertheless indicates the extravagance of the faith the French reposed in the resources found in the genius of Carnot. After the battle of Waterloo, Napoleon in his flight stopped for a short rest at a roadside inn, when an old officer stepped hastily into his room and saluted curtly. It was Carnot. "You are lost, sire," were his first words. There was no reply. "Have you conceived a plan to save your country and mine, sire?" continued Carnot. As hrug of the shoulders was all the reply. Then Carnot pulled a paper from his pocket and handing it to Napoleon said: "There is a plan, sire, made by your your country and mine, sire?" continued Carnot. A shrug of the shoulders was all the reply. Then Carnot pulled a paper from his pocket and handling it to Napoleon said: "There is a plan, sire, made by your old master in the art of war. Follow it strictly and you will yet save our France." Napoleon took the paper. "But," added the narrator, "Napoleon did not take the advice, he did not follow Carnot's plan, and France was lost." So deep rooted is the faith in Carnot's genins in the French mind that anecdotes like the above are invented to show that even after Waterloo it was only Napoleon's supercilious contempt for Carnot's advice that brought about the final defeat of France.

It is this intensity of admiration for the Carnot of the revolutiouary period to which M. Sadi-Carnot now owes his elevation to the presidency. His father, Hippolyte Carnot, still alive, was never of any real importance in public life. Nevertheless, his steady adherence to republican principles made the French believe that the revolutionary tendency was hereditary in the Carnot family. Under the second empire he made it a point to follow his father's example of opposition to Napoleon by refusing to take the oath of allegiance to the emperor when elected to the legislative assembly. That demonstration was repeated three times, and it constitutes about the whole of the public life of Carnot the father.

From the Denver Republican.

"I like dogs," said a venerable physician the other night, "because of all creatures wearing hair on their hides they are the most honest—you may always trust them to do what is right in the canine economy."

The remarksrecalled the memory of two incidents occurring recently. It will be remembered that about two months ago Mr. John Dollof, of Boulder, was killed. Dr. Dolloff was the owner of a fine dog—his almost inseparable companion. From the time that the body of the unfortunate man was broughthome the dog maintained his station near the corpse. After the funeral the dog was missed, and, a search being instituted, was discovered stretched at length on the grave of his master. All efforts to induce him to take food or leave the grave were unavailing, and to day his stretched at length on the grave of his master. All efforts to induce him to take food or leave the grave were unavailing, and to day his desiccated body still keeps watch and ward over the spot where his beloved master lies.

About two years ago Mr. Devlin, of Boulder, lost a son—killed by being thrown from a buggy. A few days after the funeral it was noticed that a favorite dog of the deceased had not been seen since the funeral services. He was found at the newly made grave, upon which his paws were resting, emaciated with fasting, with great difficulty, he was induced to return to his home, and with careful nursing was restored to his normal condition. Several times he was reclaimed from his station in the cemetery, and finally became weaned from his post-mortem attachment. Every Sunday the parents of the young man visited his grave, the dog always accompanying them, until last summer, when Mrs. Devlin, through a serious accident, became incapacitated for making her usual Sunday visit to the cemetery. The dog on the first day of her omission became uneasy, and after several efforts to attract the attention of his mistress, went to the cemetery alone, spent about two hours at the grave, and returned. From that time to the present, as regularly as Sunday comes around, he goes to the cemetery, remains about two hours, and returns home. The question as to how he determines the return of Sunday is open for the discussion of students of natural history.

GREENVILLE, Miss., November 12th.— Staff Correspondence Constitution.]—With he richest land in the world, with thousands the richest land in the world, with thousands of acres, with ample and cheap means of reaching great markets, there is no reason in the world why the Mississippi planter should not become the richest of all agricultural people.

These are broad assertions, I grant you, but they are too true to allow disbelief to enter; in fact, the only man who really honestly doubts the final success of the planter of this state is the planter himself.

And why should he?

Because, first, he has had for twelve long.

Because, first, he has had for twelve loners an unbroken run of bad luck, bad crops

His lands may be as rich ar rold; to change the figure, black as lead, they are richer than gold to the husbandman who generously and honestly works them; but no matter how rich they are, they have for over twelve years been nothing but a source of dishonor to him Willing to fly from his troubles, the poor planter has been forced to stay because none would buy of him, it mattered not the price. A man told me the other night on the train that he had four thousand night on the train that he had four thousand acres of prairie and wood land in Benton bounty. The territory is divided into districts, and each district takes upon itself the task of floating a certain amount of the bonds, of floating a certain amount of the bonds, of course iguaranteeing the yearly payment of interest. The legislature is applied to, and it gives the desired legal permission, the state, however, assuming no responsibility in the matter. Although the only thing in the world that stands towards the bondholder in the way of security for the payment, is the pro rata share of land of each party entering into the arrangement. each party entering into the arrangement, these bonds are sold at par, always command good prices, are regarded as good as state bonds, and, like state bonds, are non-taxable. The money derived from the sale of the bond is expended in work of a permanent character upon the levee; a system of careful watching during spring floods is inaugurated, and every year an assessment is made for the payment of the annual interest upon these

I asked Governor Lowry, a day or two ago, who purchased these bonds, the replied that they sold easily in New York, and also in the state and in New Orleans; that the late Colonel Richardson, the large planter, held several hundred thousands of them. A levee bond is gilt edged.

The rate of assessment for support of the levee of course is not uniform. The planter fifty miles from the river is not taxed as high as the planter on the banks, for the reason that he suffers less from overflow. The process of arranging the assessments and of successfully organizing the plan is a difficult and trouble ome one, and is here cited simply to show what tremendous disadvantages accompany planting in the bottoms. In compensation, the earth is wonderfully generous, and if the planter employs any sort of management, and is blessed with any sort of year, his crop would be accounted in Georgia "a mighty fine show-

The day is rapidly coming when the greater potion of Mississippi will be devoted to stock raising. Especially the prairie belt, where the grass is luxuriantly abundant, and where numerous water courses run. Five hundred times the amount of cotton produced by the state now could be raised in one section of the state—the delta part, if it was protected. It will be years 'yet before it will be done, for the reason that there is no pressing necessity; but when immigration shall have filled this country to the point where available space is desir able and necessary, the delta country will be looked after, and the world will see more and finer cotton than it has ever yet seen.

Presently a girl came up the path with a bucket on her head and her sun-bonnet under her arm. She was small and dark, and very pretty, but sad-looking. "I wish you would all let me in," she said.

As soon as the girlleft the store, a man detached himself from the edge of the party, and, hurrying round the store, struck a trail that in a few minutes would cross the one that Deenson's daughter was following.

A cotton tax is a kind of favorite way of taising the money. Every bale of cotton_produced in the county is taxed so much in support of the levee. Cotton being the principal thing affected, it seems but right that it should be made to bear the brunt, but then the levee tax gets to be $1.25 per bale, it looks hard upon the planter. Other sort of assessments are employed, everything being made to pay tribute.

Of late years a rather novel method has been ""Wal," said Sall Stroll, telling about it at the settlement, "if that warn't the most remarkable thing! I wouldn't have believed it if I hadn't a-seen it. Thar war the old man all right; thar war Jack Seton just stunned a bit; thar war plot only upsor as war nateral; and thar war the rocks lyin' about them as chuck-full of gold as an egg of meat. Jack's goin' to marry Doll. Old man Deenson wouldn't hear of it at first, but he's given in some since Jack saved his life. He never had good sense, nohow, old Deenson—showed that when he sot hisself down on that rock to get blowed to kingdom come. He war right about one thing, though—that's this gold. Doll Deenson'il own the richest claim in the hull state."

ARP'S TRAVELS.

His Recent Visit to Irwinton, Georgia.

How the Philosopher Succeeded in Arous ing the Folks-That Biting Dog-Other Notes of Interest.

PECULIARITIES OF THE OLD TOWN.

I had a call to Irwinton. I honored the call and it honored me, for those are good people there. It is not so large a town as Chicago, but it has no anarchy, and everything looks calm and serene. It is one of those old-fashioned towns that is off the railroad, and they don't care if it is, so they have the courthous and the jail and can hear the sheriff call twice a and the jail and can hear the sheriif call twice a year. I like such places. I like their "otium cum dig," though they don't dig alarmingly much. I like the open welcome of their store plazzas where the lawyers and doctors and preachers meet to discuss affairs, public and private, and tell anecdotes and whittle on soft-pine and hold down the chairs that used to have split bottoms, but now have rawhide with all the hair worn off except the suburbs. I like the slow and measured dignity with which these people come and go and move about the town. There is nobody tired when night comes. Nobody stoop shouldered from overwork. Nobody's shoes worn out at the toes. overwork. Nobody's shoes worn out at the toes. When the merchant wants to go to dinner he can shut up and go and lose no trade by it, for the kind hearted customers will wait till he comes back. The lawyer can go fishing and the doctor attend to his farm. The jail door stands open all the year round and the sheriff has a hungry look for lack of business. This must be the place where the poet lived when he wrote "Man wants little here below." There is neither fashion nor folly here, but there is good, honest, old fashioned society and good old-fashioned schools and lots of children, all born in lawful wedlock and from whom may come preachers and judges and senators, and maybe a governor or president—who knows? Georgia has never had a president and it will be her time before long. Great men move to cities, but they are not born and raised there. Cities breed shrewdness. The country and the unpretending towns give leisure for reflection, and in leisure there is wisdom.

There is one thing about Irwinton that is peculiar. A stranger can't slip up on the town in the night.

the unpretending towns give leisure for reflection, and in leisure there is wisdom. There is one thing about Irwinton that is peculiar. A stranger can't slip up on the town in the night. I tried it. They wrote me to get off at McEntyres, and so I got off about midnight and looked around for light, but there was no light. I expected a hack or a mail boy, or I thought there was a hotel with the lamp burning in the hall, but there was nothing but darkness, utter darkness, and that darkness was cold, very cold. I saw a man moving off and hailed him. "Where is the hotel, my triend?" said I. "There ain't none about here," said he. "Where do folks stop who get off here?" said I. "There ain't none about here," said he. "Where do folks stop who get off here?" said I. "They don't git off the night train." said he, "and if they do they take it afoot to Irwinton like I'm gwine to do," and he started off. "Hold on my friend," said I, "don't some body live about here?". "Yes," said he, "the depot agent lives away up yander on that hill, but he won't take any body im—you needn'tgo there." "Has he got a biting dog?" said I. "I think he has," said he, and away he went. I saw the shadowy road and the dim outline of a house, and seizing my grip sack, I started up the steep ascent, but not with alacrity; nor was I altogether calm and serene. I was thinking about that dog—a big yaller stump tail dog—and the nearer I got, the more I thought about that dog.

I stopped and listened. Then I creeped cautiously towards the front gate and listened again. There was a tree close by—a small tree with limbs low down, and I stood by that tree, for I felt like it was a friend. Soon I spied another tree a little nearer, and I made for it with alacrity, and reconoitered again. I have not climbed a tree in ten years, but I felt like I hadn't lost the lick. I stood there waiting for that dog and wondering where he would bite me first, but he didn't come nor make any canine sign. I kept my knife open as a last resort, and my heart beat up lively. I if I had been ordered off with a shotgun. But I found a kind welcome and a good bed, and my feelings beat thanksgiving day along ways, for I don't like any such dogone business of a dark night whether the dog be gone or not. The morning brought light and a good break-fast and a friend from Irwinton who was ex-state."

"But old Deenson made no answer, for he had already returned to his golden dream-life he was the said and say," if this 'lead' don't bring somethin', I'll give un. But it's coming the work of the said non day, "it this 'lead' don't bring somethin', I'll give un. But it's coming the work her, and Doll was watching for him at the door.

"Doll," he said one day, "it this 'lead' don't bring somethin', I'll give un. But it's coming the work her, and Doll was watching for him at the door.

"Doll," he said one day, "it his 'lead' don't bring somethin', I'll give un. But it's coming the work her, and Doll was watching for him at the door.

"Doll," he said one day, "it his 'lead' don't bring somethin', I'll give un. But it's coming to himself, and that was the sole workin now. Come She hurried out, and he after her. It was along way to said the sole was an air right; thar was a long way to the s assent. "Vell, my frent," said the drummer, "dat vas all imagination—de room vas not going round and round at all—dis house is solid—very solid. I vas vet myself one time and know shoost how it is, and so I tell you it vas not going round and round. Vas you ever so vet before like you vas last night?"

The kind, loving sympathy of the drummer was irresistible. It was impossible to smother our risibles, but the poor victim couldn't stand it. He left the room for some fresh air or some more wet and we lost him. This same drummer managed somehow to offend a man about town, and the man swore he was going to whip him. He approached with hostile demonstrations, but the drummer stepped back and cautioned him in supplicating tones, and laying his hand upon his heart, said: "My frent, you should not strike me. Bevare how you excite me. I have heart disease very pad and am liable to drop down dead any moment if you excite me. My physician tell me dot de slightest shock to my system will make me to fall down dead, and den you feel so pad, so very pad about dot—ch?"

This plea, and his agonizing look, so alarmed the man that he refrained and took his satisfaction in language.

Last year, this drummer was indicted for indulging in a pleasant little game of poker in his room at the hotel. He went home and wrote the solicitor one of the most touching and pathetic letters that ever was penned. He plead for mercy and forgiveness, for the sake of his dear little darling wife—the trusting, innocent, angel who would be utterly heartbroken, were she to hear of his misfortune.

of his dear little darling wife—the trusting, innocent, angel who would be utterly heartbroken, were she to hear of his misfortune.
The solicitor said he never read a more affecting letter, and so he wrote him back some kind words and good advice, and lots of sympathy and told him to send ten dollars and the case should be stricken, part for the sake of that little angel wife. Of course he sent the money, and the case was dismissed, and not long after the solicitor learned that he did not have any wife at all nor ever had. "Ah he is smart." said he, "and as clever as he is smart. Everybody in this country knows him and everybody likes him."
Well, Dublin is a pretty wet town, but it is a good town for business, and is growing rapidly. It is the terminus of the Wrightville and Dublin railroad—a new road that is doing wonders for that region.

WILD DOGS OF THE MOUNTAINS.

WILD DOGS OF THE MOUNTAINS. They Vanquish a Drove of a Dozen Bear After a Terrible Battle, Wind River Mountaineer.

The writer has had occasion one or two times prior to this to tell of the fierce nature and The writer has had occasion one or two times prior to this to tell of the fierce nature and savage practices of the wild dogs which infest the mountains of the Upper Wind River. These dogs are not the common wolf of the western prairies and mountains. They are something far more powerful and dangerous. Several years since a male Sootch staghound and a female English bulldog ran away in company from Fort Washakie, made their home in the mountains, and these wild dogs of the Upper Wind River are their savage offspring. With such ancestorship how can this wild offspring help being a canine terror?

To the speed and endurance of the Scotch staghound is mated the ferocity and tenacity of the English bulldog, and these wild dogs are evidently worthy in every way of their origin. Speedy, savage and stubborn, these animals are deterred by no pursuit, are restrained by no fear and are daunted by no difficulties. They pursue, slay and devour; such is the simplicity and efficiency of this native code of canine ethics. The latest exploit of these canine marauders of which we have any account is the destruction of a small berd of bears. It apnears that about two ploit of these canine marauders of which we have any account is the destruction of a small herd of bears. It appears that about two weeks ago a dozen bears of the dreaded and large silver-tip variety came down from the surrounding mountains to enjoy themselves on the sunny slopes of the Warm Spring Basin. In the course of the day those bears all got together, and while thus massed were attacked by about 100 of the wild dogs.

The conflict was terrible. The bears fought with all the courage and ferocity for which the silver-tip is noted, but the mingled strain of staghound and bulldog supplied a courage and ferocity greater still, and at the end of half an hour every bear had died where he was brought to bay.

half an hour every bear had died where he was brought to bay.

The dogs suffered severely, twenty-five of their number perishing in the fight. The survivors wasted little time, however, in mourning over their dead companions, but began at once on the banquet their own powers had provided, and in an hour from the time the combat ceased only the clean-picked bones of the twelve bears remained to tell of the struggle to the death which had taken place and the savage feast which had followed it.

Breaking a Window.

If a tree were to break a window, what might the window say? Tremendous (tremend-us). Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein has a tremendous sale, for it mends all forms of coughs, colds and lung troubles.

Better Than Lightning. One day in October two farmers drove into the race course in a one-horse wagon to which is high-headed colt was attached, and announced that they wan'ed to time him a mile. Atsulky was hired, a horseman asked to hold the watch, and one of the men said:
"I rather expect that colt will astonish you."

"Yes, you think he is fast, eh?" "Yes, you think he is fast, eh?"
"Well, the man I got him of said he was the next thing to lightning. I think he'll go down to 2:18, though he's never been on a track."

The horse was scored and started, and he came inder the wire in just 4.06.
"Some powerful mistake there, mister," said the

"Some powerful mistake there, mister," said the owner as he was given the time. "I think he needs the whip and a little yelling."

He told the driver to shake him up in lively style, and the result was that the colt passed the score on a runaway. At the first turn the driver was flung off, and soon after that the sulky was demolished, and the horse increased his pace. He came around like a cyclone, and as he passed the wire the owner looked at the time and shouted. "Glory! Glory! He's beaten the record! That mile was made in 2;12! The feller never lied to me a single bit!"

Dispensing With Male Escort. The custom of women attending the theater in groups of three or more without an escort is even more general this winter than ever before. It is a wery sensible and proper sort of independence, for it has always seemed rather hard to debar the sex from visiting either opera or play simply because no man happened to be available at the moment. Itis still a bit awkward and embarrassing, for on enter-ing a public place every one present has a way of staring over one's shoulder, as though hunting up the missing man, but if the courageous individual the missing man, but it whe collegeous limited the full of pluck this is soon overcome. Then, there is strength in numbers. No one thinks of venturing out with less than two companions, which sets at rest any scruples on the score of personal protection. To many there is no pleasure equal to theater-going, and a prejudice will soon be lived down that is based on such narrow limitations.

CONSTITUTION OFFICE.
ATLANTA, December 10, 1887.

Last week we made mention of the wonderful inbrease in traffic and earnings of the Georgia Pacific milway. Since then we have been favored with adrailway. Since then we have been favored with advance sheets from the president's annual report for the year ending September "0, 185", by thave not space to notice it in detail today. Net carnings for the year increased 94 64-100 per cent, or $203,80°, 2.3. Such results as these are rarely attained by any railway in 50 short a time. They give unmistakable evidence of the wisdom displayed in locating the road, of the grand future herore it and of most excellent management.

ment. We also have the annual report of General E. P. Alexander, president of the Central Railroad and Banking company of Georgia for the year ending august 31, 1887. This report deserves special commandation for its completeness of detail. It gives complete and full information as to every feature of the company's financial status, and will be interesting reading to anyone concerned as a share or bond-holder. The result of the year's operation is an increase of $207,191.07 in net earnings. The directors have declared a dividend of 4 per cent payable on and after the 21st instant, making 8 per cent dividends for the year. The policy of the management dends for the year. The policy of the management seems a wise one, and looks as if even the share-holder, who so strenuously opposed a change a year 350, should be satisfied with it. When we think of the new lines of roads being built and operated in competition with these and other of our older competition. roads, such results can hardly be expected, but they are cold facts and the only explanation is that the traffic of the country is increasing faster than railroad mileage. This gives us another opportunity to say that Atlanta must build some new roads and the facts herein reported are ample evi-dence that they will be remunerative investments sutside of the acknowledged benefits to be derived from them by every property owner, manufacturer, tradesman and laborer within our midst. There has been an amplitude of talk on this line and it is time something practical was done. We want workers now instead of talkers.

Sheffield was a sort of bonanza for a number of Atlantians once, and when the harvest time came a majority of them reaped, in other words, sold out at a big profit. Subsequently the stock has had its nps and downs; at one time a whopping big "up." young as high as 2.60 a share, but then a decline set in until it went down, within a few weeks past, to 55c. Atlanta began to look sideways at it then and it had a mighty tempting appearance to some folks. As a result a quiet buying of the stock by local in-vestors began, and a number of the lucky ones on the ground floor turned, who, long since, took their on the venture are again shateholders. After Atlants people had parted with their holdings, the sapital of the Sheffield company was largely increased—now standing at $1,000,000—and the stock recy much scattered—Montgomery, Decatur, Nash-rille, Memphis and Sheffield capitalists going into it largely, but persistent inquiry at these and other points within the past week discloses the fact that rery few shares are to be had at either place. It es at 75 cents asked today, and the opinion of a well known broker is that an effort to buy a few hundred shares would put it up in the vicinity of par. This does not look unreasonable, because the par. This does not look unreasonable, because the treat bulk of the stock is in strong hands, and is not inkely to come out until much higher figures are blained, and the financial condition of the company, as we understand it, warrants certainly a better price than recent quotations have indicated. We have reflable information that the company has in the treasury some $00,000 purchase money notes, besides still owning several thousand acres of valuable land of the original town site. A gentleman received, a few days ago, a letter from a friend reliding at Sheffield, who writes that during the year to brick stores and 500 residences have been erected; that the Lheffield company's furnace will go into last ebout the 20th of this month; that the four ther furnaces are being built rapidly; that they will low in early next spring, and that the two now has a population of 3,000 which must be arrely word, he says, the future of the town was next so peen waiting for the stock, the people who have been waiting for the stock of the people who have been waiting for the stock of the people who have been waiting for the stock of the people who have been waiting for the stock of the people who have been waiting for the stock of the people who have been waiting for the stock of the people who have been waiting for the stock of the town was next so promising. NEW YORK, December 10.—The stock market boday was extremely dull after first half hour, and while heavy to weak, there was almost no feature of Interest developed throughout the session. The bank statement was a disappointment to bears, and prevented the usual Saturday selling movement at the close. The Richmond and West Point preferred recovered handsomely from its late depression. The movements in most stocks were for small fractions, and were devoid of feature. The temper of the and were devoid of feature. The temper of the toom was conservatively be arish. The opening was beavy at fractional declines, which were supplemented in early unding by further losses. The market became extremely dull after the first attack was completed, and from that time dealings were leatureless beyond a fairly firm tone, which lasted this the close, which, however, was barely firm at or bear the lowest prices reached. The closing prices are generally low of, though, in a few cases—fow not more that five eighth per cent, the exceptions being in the Burkington and Quincy, which last lik Kansas and Texas 1½ and Pacific Mail seven-sighths. On the other hand, the Richmond and West Point preferred rose to 1½, and Central Pacific I per cent. The sales aggregated $0,000 shares. Exchange quiet and steady at 482@4.86. NEW YORK, December 10-C. L. Green & Co., in their report on cotton futures today, say: There has been a fair business for the short session on the market with a generally firm tone indicated and an advance of 5@6 points well maintained to the close. A more favorable public report from Liverpool indorsing yesterday's private accounts and latter still com-ing cheerful, coupled with an indication of smaller receipts, infused strength and induced shorts to cover quite promptly, with a little assistance ob-tained by bidding by the local bull element. Some New Orleans buying orders came in, but aside from this there was not much outside demand.

NEW YORK, December 10-[Special.]-From Hub bard, Price & Co., through John S. Ernest: Spots in Liverpool were quoted steadler today, the future market with buyers at last night's prices. The ad-vance during the day gave tone to our market at the opening, and operators, with customary fickleness began covering their recent sales at an improvement of about three points from the close of yesterday. The feeling continued firm during the two hours of the exchange, and a total gain of six points was established by the dealings of the day, which showed a greater strength than had been looked for. The lighter receipts have given encouragement to those favoring higher prices, and telegrams indicating a decreased estimate of 75,000 bales at New Orleans, as against earlier dispatches naming 85,000 bales, and the probable receipts were circulated. Our correspondents te'egraph us that the month's receipts at New Orleans will probably be 350,000 bales; at all ports 900,000 bales. This compares with 430,000 and 1,134,000 bales in 1886. From the North Atlantic States we have some advices of exhaustion, A friend in North Carolina writes: "Every lock 1s out and ginned, and receipts will be light ere many days." Should there be a sharp falling off our market will Should there be a sharp falling off our market will probably overlook the excess over last year, which must be lost to make the crop equal to the preceding, and buying may be expected to advance prices. Our cable summarizes the Liverpool market as follows: Closed firm with upward tendency. Prospects of trade encouraging. Think Manchester will follow the lead of the cotton market will be ruled by receipts at the ports. A later cable to us says: "Reports are current receipts, week after part 180 000. ports are current receipts week after next 130,000 bales. Ellisons circular makes weekly consumption of Great Britain 72,000 bales and the Continent 71,000. NEW YORK, December 10. The total visible supply of cotton for the world is 2,92,380 bales, of which 2,473,260 bales are American, against 2,797,551 bales and 2,397,151 bales respectively last year. Receipts at all interior towns 159,451 bales. Receipts from plantations 253,150 bales. Crop in sight 4,405,883 bales.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Features of the Speculative Movement in Grain and Produce.

Special to The Constitution.
CHICAGO, December 10.—There were reports of a cold wave in wheat at the opening of the 'change today. May wheat opened at $5½ but immediately sold off to $5¼, which was a trifle below at what it closed last night. May corn opened 1/4c lhigher at 55% and sold immediately at 54%. Pork opened higher at 14.80 for January and showed light receipts of hogs at the yards. The government report, which was incomplete, bad a bearish effect on the market and this feeling was helped along by the report that Ferry had been assassinated. May wheat sold down to 84% to 911:30 o'clock, the dewheat sold down to 84% by 11:30 o'clock, the decline being helped along by a weakness in corn. At 12:30 it was fairly steady at 86c. The great depresing influence in corn was the large estimated receipts for Monday. When they were made known it dropped to 54c for May.

Provisions reacsed a trifle better after the bear crowd stopped seiling.

WILLIAMS—HARDIE.

Major Tom Williams and Mrs. Mary Carr Hardie, "the model bachelor" and the "prettiest widow in Georgia," were married on Thursday evening last, by Rev. Dr. Strickler. The marriage was a quiet one at 4F2ast Mutchell street. No cards.

The bride and groom are well known in Atlanta, and the state. Their many friends will be glad to congranulate them on this most happy result. There is a little fouch of romance in this matriage. An aid friend has said that the major was Miss Mary Carra first beau, about the time he first wore his spaulettes.

A NUMBER OF PLEASANT HAPPENINGS

At the Clubs, and in the Parlors-Excur sions and Dinings-Weddings and Rumors of Coming Events.

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the reather, quite a large and appreciative audience issembled at the hall in West End, on Thursday rening last, the occasion being an entertainment by the young ladies for the benefit of the Presbyte-

Wounded.

The first number on the programme, a piano solo, by Miss Carrie Ward M thews, was a good beginning for so pleasant an entertainment.

The recitations of Miss MedGhee, were enthusiastibility received and repeatedly encored.

The piano solo of Miss Mad Watson was not only brilliantly executed, but showed a clear conception on the part of the young lady, of the composer's meaning. Miss Watson is a puell of Professor Earlit, and a pianist of unusual excellence.

The vocal solo by Miss Moore, Non Torno, brought but that young lady's voice in all its clear and bird-

The vocal solo by Miss Moore, Non Torno, brought put that young lady's voice in all its clear and birdlike sweetness. She sang with charming expression, and never to better advantage. She gave as an enrore, "Tender and True." The tanleaux were highly enjoyed by all, and showed a careful study of the postumes of the times.

The preparations for the Kirmes are going shead with a vim which is characteristic of Atlanta and Atlanta people. It may be found necessary to postpone the entertainment until after lent on account of the lack of open dates at the opera house, but when it does come it will be a notable event in Madison.

It has grown into a maxematic proposition that Madison ladies excel in everything. This applies not only to their quiet grace, beautiful character and generous conduct, but to their rare good taste and excellent judgment as displayed in their management of every entertainment gotten up for popular enjoyment and public good.

For weeks the Kirmess has been the theme of the fireside, the topic of the social circle, and everywhere expectancy has been on tiptoe, awaiting an event that promised such unique pleasure to the public, as well as material profit to those in whose benefit the entertainment was planned.

Last night this promised treat was presented, and a more unapproachable success in artistic arrangement, genulue sociality, and clever, shrewd business management never was seen or dreamed of in Madison. In truth, it could not be surpassed in a metropolitan city, where the appliances for making such an occasion a success, are closer at hand and more abundant.

John F. Ward, in "The Doctor,"

This favorite comedian will play "The Doctor" one night only, Friday December 16th, on his way north from New Orleans. The Picayune thus sloke of the performence:
"A good and fine, not vith standing the chilliness of the night, greeted John F. Ward in The Doctor last night. The story of the play is a simple one, constructed on the manners and whims of a bluff but kind-hearted old doctor, with a daughter, a niece and a peculiar man servant. The niece, who is the daughter of a fich and retired jeweler, marties a young iota who believes in Jealing an easy life and syending bis father-in-law's money. This gives his wife no end of tooble, and causes her much servow. Her husband, however, after a stormy but practical interview with the doctor, concludes to change, his system of life, straighten out his affairs and take the active management of Cadadale Manor, and so to sina's is a happy one.

The different situations of the play are put in to present the ludicrons side of Hig ard create laughter among spectators. John F. Ward appears as Higgins, the funny servant, and establishes himself as an eccentric comedian. He has been in the service of the doctor for many years, and has succeeded in getting the technicalities of the vrofess onal language mixed into an extravagant dialect that surprises and take that lesteners.

Little things like this show, better than can be shown any other way, the behind-the-scenes life of actors. It comes from the Mirror: "Few instances of fillal devotion stronger than that of Al Lipman have come under my notice. His life seemed to be wrapped up in his mother, and his greatest pleasure was to provide for her happiness and comfort. Mr. Lipman is with Arthur Rehan's company. One day last week Dr. Robertson sent a telegram to the manager, at Providence, stating that Lipman's mother was Ill, and the former had best come to New York at once. Mr. Rehan sent a dispatch in reply, asking if the case was urgent. The answer came that it was too late—she was dead: The terrible news was broken as gently as possible to the young actor, but it almost prostrated him. With this load of grief he had to play lis part in a comedy that night, but he did his duty manfully. These heart-treaking necessities arise frequently, alas! on the stage. The actor never realizes how completely he is the property of the public until when, in the face of some dreadful domestic bereavement, like that I have mentioned, he is obliged to hide his sorrow behind a smilling mask."

Joe Howard, in his Chat in the Dramatic

Joe Howard, in his Chat in the Dramatic News, presents some thoughts about the treatment of acto s by the press, which are worthy of notice. His is a discourse upon the cheap "booming" practiced by the actors and he takes the Mrs. Potter-larton Keys-Harry Miner troubles as a text. The rubile eye looks with suspicion upon all such troubles and they are usually believed to be cheap methods of advertisement for somebody. Howard says, among other things: "Of the thousand actors in this country, how many are known to the public by name, and yet is there one who, in his own judgment, is not a public che facter, and perfectly well known, not only to the habitues of the theatres but to the promenders on the principal streets of our chief cities? I think actors would be surprised if they knew how many people attend representations without once looking at the names in the cast. They know that Mr. Irving and Miss Terry are in Fanst. How many other names can they give of the ladies and gentlemen in the cast. Nine-tenths of the well meaning, hard-working, pains-taking, industrious actors are absolutely unknown by hame to anybody whatever outside of their immediate professor, their relatives, friends and crities." All of which is just as true of stage life as of life in other occupations. Joe Howard, in his Chat in the Dramatic

Mr. W. H. Fleming, of Augusta, Ga., is in our city for a few days this week.

Mr. F. H. Saffold, of Sandersville, Ga., visited our town on Wednesday.

Mrs. Kate Green, of our city, a popular, a tractive, accomplished and enfertaining young lady, gave to her friends on Wednesday evening last an exceedingly pleasant entertainment. The nature of the invitation extended was for all to come masked, and some ridiculous, others astonishingly beautiful costumes were presented by her many guests. An invitation was extended to all, and a pleasant evening was had and one long to be remembered by all.

The Young Men's club of our city gave to their friends an entertainment on Friday evening last.

A number of people are visiting our town this week, superior court being in session.

Miss Neely, of Brooklyn, N. Y., is the guest of her brother, Mr. R. C. Neely, of this city.

Miss Levy Jordan, of Savannah, Ga., is the guest of Mrs. Thomas Quinney, of this city.

The Prisoner Reading Newspaper Account of His Trial-The Witnesses for Defense and Their Testimony.

Macon, Ga., December 10 .- [Special.] -The Macox, Ga., December to.—Speam, morning dawned cold and cloudy, and the city was shrouded in gloom. At 9 o'clock the prisoner entered the room and took his seat, for the first time unaccompanied by either relative or counsel. Captain Rutherford came in a few minutes atterward, and Mr. Walker quickly followed. The prisoner was soon deeply engrossed in reading his trial, as pubdeeply engrossed in reading his trian, a partial lished in the morning papers. His eyes had more of the meditative, far-away expression than has been observable than hitherto. He has not been shaven since Monday, and that bably adds to the weary look on his face. He continued reading while his attorneys counselled together, and only raised up once when asked a question, and immediately resumed

Captain Hardeman looked as aggressive as ever, with his crested head and sharp black eyes. Guerry and Hall were stolid, as usual, watchful and attentive.

Mayor Price joined the "amen corner," where Judge Blount was already comfortably ensconced, and although the reporter thought they would have to send a bailiff after Colonel Greer, that portly gentleman soon put in an appearance.

Appearance.
Luanna Cooper was the first witness sworn.

Luanna Cooper was the first witness sworn. She testified to living some half mile from the Woolfolk homestead, and that on the night of the 6th of August she was up at about 2 o'clock a. m., making a poultice for her husband's knee, and she heard a feet clock saw it was fifteen minutes after two. She though it was a woman's scream, and half an hour afterward's she heard a great deal of talking over about Green Lockett's and thought she could detect Green's voice, but could not tell who the other one was. Dr. H. McHattan was again called to the and. The little old wool hat was given him, and Captain Rutherford asked him whether if and Captain Rutherford asked him whether if that hat had laid in the well some eight months, and had been found about the middle of August and both been worn since, whether the microscope would have detected blood in it. Witness answered that in his opinion it would not. Witness was then asked if on the sixth of August, some bloody clothing had been thrown in there, and remained some six or eight hours, what would have been the effect. Witness replied that the blood would be likely to dissolve in the water and mix with it like salt.

The next question was whether the blood would be likely to permeate the hat. Witness thought that it would hardly penetrate such a piece of felt as that. On the cross-examination Solicitor Hardeman asked if a clot of blood should fall on the hat whether it would be likely to penetrate the hat. Witness thought that the blood would rather tend to go on through the water rather than the hat, because the resistance was less. Witness did not think blood would go into the hat in the well as readily as it would

"We will get rid of capillary attraction, and I will ask you direct if you do not think the blood would soak into a wet hat more readily than a dry one?"

Witness believed that it would. It was evident that witness meant that it depended very much in what sort of medium the blood and hat were in when they came in contact. The court asked two or three questions, one of which was if there were other cells that re-sembled blood cells. Witness answered that there were, one of which was "the yeast

Dr. W. C. Bass was next called. He stated that he was president of Wesleyan Female college. Miss Pearl Woolfolk was a pupil of his. Captain Woolfolk failed to pay the last year's tuition, amounting to some $150, for which he gave his note. He wrote witness a letter dated July 8th.

THE LETTER WAS PRODUCED and read by Dr. Bass. It read:
"Macon, Ga., July S. '87.—Rev. Dr. Bass, Macon, Ga.: Dear Sir.—I received your note and have been trythg to effect sales of something to meet the paper. I find it easy to effect sales at sacrifices and on long time, but as yet have met no one who seems to want to pay down ready money.

Jim Foster was next introduced and asked if he knew John Jeff. He did. Did he work for Captain Woolfolk this year and did he chop any cotton, was asked. He did. On cross examination witness stated that he never knew of any trouble between Captain Woolfolk and Jeff, and that the former worked for Woolfolk until his time was up, about two weeks before the tragedy. He had been working there with Mr. Chambliss ever since. He did not know whether Woolfolk paid Jeff or not. Witness swore that Jeff only worked for Captain Richard Woolfolk, and no other Woolfolk.

S. S. Pennington was next called, and Cap-tain Rutherford begun a question which was objected to by the prosecution. The court ruled that the question which was about to be asked was inadmissible and THE JURY WERE SENT OUT, against which the defendant entered a pro-test.

His earnestness was overpower-ng, and his voice thrilled the heart as he deing, and his voice thrilled the heart as he delivered sentence after sentence in support of his claim. It was certainly a most ramarkably strong speech. His peroration was grand, and he asserted in thunder tones, "As sure as I am a living man more than one killed the Woolfolk family, one man never could have done it and when your honor considers the matter carefully this fact will come to you overwhelmingly." Captain Hardeman's reply was fully in keeping with the address of defendant. He characterized threat to him that he "would kill every damned one of them," referring to the Woolfolk's, as one of the most deceptive answers ever made. It will be remembered that Pennington simply said, "If that is not the man it is his twin brother."

His speech was direct and to the point, and bristled all over with legal points. He showed

The discussion continued for some time. At the conclusion, the court read, on the subject of HEARSAY EVIDENCE, and as such classed Pennington's statements as such evidence, which is inadmissible. As to sending out the jury his honor stated that the law in the case was that the case must be tried on the legal testimony, and not what counsel might, could, or should try to prove. The court stated that the evidence of Pennington was inadmissible before the jury. The jury was recalled at 11 o'clock. By this time Mrs. Crane and Mrs. Edwards had entered the room and were in their accustomed places and pected, and was not so alert as in the earlier part of the trial.

Faces were seen among the audience that seldom appear in a courtroom. The venerable Mr. Howard, with his snowy hair and beard, was in the same seat that he has occupied ever since the man charged with the murder of his beloved daughter has been on trial for his life.

Captain Futherford had asked the court that he he allowed to make the statement to the he be allowed to make the statement to the jury that defense HAD OFFERED THE EVIDENCE of Pennington, and that the court had ruled it inadmissible. The court agreed to allow defendant to state to the jury that defendant had offered in the opening to prove certain things by certain witnesses, but would not allow him to state those points which the court had ruled out.

court had ruled out.

When the jury resumed their seats, Captain Rutherford said: "Gentlemen of the jury, the court has permitted me to state to you that I offered Mr. Pennington as evidence, in regard to the threat of which I spoke in my opening address, and the court has ruled it inadmissible, thus depriving me of the benefit of that testimony." After a short recess, business was resumed and Frank Kitchens called for, but failed to appear. The court announced that he under-stood that Kitchens was discharged last night. Mr. Walker stated that Kitchens came to him last night and told him that he had seen Cap-tain Rutherford, and the latter said they did not need him, consequently he was discharged by Walker.

The court agreed that if the ovidence that defense intended to produce by Kitchens was admissible, he would have the witness sent for before he closed the case. Defense then got the photographs of Jack Dubose and showed them to the court. em to the court.

"Here is one taken at his best and here is the other taken when Dubose, for some reason, tried to prevent his picture being taken," remark-ed Captain Rutherford.

For an instant the court gazed on the two originals of the cuts published in THE CONSTITUTION some time ago, and handing them back remarked:

"HE LOOKS BETTER AT HIS WORST
than at his best."
Captain Rutherford then set forth what he intended to prove by Kitchens in regard to Dubese. He urged the points in this case very strongly in a long speech.
Solicitor Hardenan's answer was a masterly effort. He claimed Jack Debose was a crank and his continuatory a thrivation and his con-effort. He claimed Jack Debose was a crank and his entire story a fabrication, and his confession was made under such circumstances as the law says plainly it shall not be made. He further asserted that although Walker had been to see Debose, while still in jail in Cherokee county, Debose had been turned out even after Sheriff Kitchens had informed Mr. Walker that he should be obliged to turn the prisoner loose unless something was done with Debose, Debose had been turned out and allowed to fly to the mountains "to lowed to fly to the mountains "to BECOME A SCAPEGOAT for other people's crimes."

Mr. Walker answered in a short speech, winding up with the challenge that if there was any imputation intended against his professional character in the matter of his consultation with Jack [Dubose, whom he had refused to defend most emphatically, it was false from its very inception.

After some discussion the court agreed to allow

ATTORNEY WALKER AS A WITNESS, and the jury was recalled and Walker took the stand. When asked the first question, was put in regard to Jack Debose, it was ruled out. He was then examined in regard to the examination of the bloody clothing. He testified that the hat was the only article that he saw examined. He saw the shirt examined, even had blood from his own wrist examined, and witness then left, with the understanding that no further examinations be made, except to satisfy his own mind.

On the cross-examination witness agreed that Captain Hardeman had invited him to be present during the examination. Captain Hardeman did not promise not to make any further examination of the articles. Dr. Clifton was the one who said that. THE AFFIERNOON SESSION.

At 2:30 p. m. the proceedings of the court began. The auditorium and gallery were filled to overflowing. The prisoner had been clean shaved and looked much better than he did this morning, and Mrs. Crane and Mrs. Edwards sat close beside him with his attorneys, Mr. Walker and the indefatigable Rutherford. After considerable delay court begun business at 3:30 p. m., W. H. McKay was called to the stand. Witness was asked what apprehensions of danger Captain Woolfolk expressed to him. Prosecution objected. The court ruled the evidence admissible under conditions. Witness said that Captain Woolfolk had said to him that he found that George Caldwell, whom he had sent to the chaingang, would not be sent to the chaingang long enough, and he was afraid Caldwell, or his friends, would do him injury. On cross examination witness stated that was about a year ago, while the prosecution was going on just after Caldwell had been put in jail. Witness was dismissed. Mr. Cowan was then called to the stand, and he testified that he was

Rev. Young J. Allen, LL. D., was introduced to the conference, of which he has been a member for nearly thirty years, but which he has attended but two or three times. His work in China is the pride of the conference.

The following resolutions, introduced by Mr. Lovejoy, were unanimously passed:

"The Modern Theater" was the subject of a ser mon delivered by the Rev. W. A. Candler, of this conference, in McKendree church, Nashville, Tenn, October 9, 1837, ot which he was pastor at the time. At the conclusion of the sermon, its positions were assailed, its statements denied, and the preacher criticised by a traveling actress.

In view of the fact that this incident has been widely circulated and generally commented on by the religious and secular press of the country, thereby bringing prominent before the minds of the people the question of the modern theater, we deem it our duty, as members of the body of Christ, to give expression to the opinion which we, as a church, have held from the beginning, as to the moral character of the modern theater. Therefore,

Ecolved 1. That the deliverance of our chief rastors touching "such diversions as cannot be taken in the name of the Lord Jesus," among which is attending the theater, receives now, as it has done from the first, our fullest indorsement.

Pierce, who this year retires from the presiding eldership of this district. Rev. Mr. Pierce told the bishop that he had "caned" Rev. S. P. Richardson off that work and now he was "watched" off. His reply was replete with fine humor and genuine love to the noble people of Rome district.

The first annual meeting of the society for the aid of parsonage building was held in the Methodist church Friday night. Notwithstanding the rain the church was nearly filled. Bishop Key presided and conducted the services. Miss Lucinda Helms, of Kentucky, who is the general secretary of this great movement, was present, and all the important facts of the movement were put by her in possession of the meeting. Additional remarks were made by General C. A. Evans, W. H. LaPrade and Bishop Key.

At the Methodist church at 3 p. m. a meeting of the Woman's Missionary society was held. The church was crowded to hear an address on woman's work, by Dr. Young J. Allen, our Georgia missionary in China. Woman's work, he Insists, was learned from the heathen, and has providentially attained its present place of importance. Men can not reach the women, can not speak to, not to mention preach to, the women of China. Children occupy a foremost place in the conversion of the world. Woman's work is two fold, reaching the mother's and the children. The joint labors of the male and female missionaries has been successful. They are complimentary of each other.

Dr. Allen then indicated on the black-board the relation of the stations of work to each other.

Dr. Allen then indicated on the black-board the relation of the stations of work to each other. He then indicated the admirable location of our churches and schools in the most accessible parts of Shanghai Soochow and Nantziang. Our property is well purchased. He then spoke of the opposition purchased. He then spoke of the opposition of the natives to women as teachers, but they have demonstrated their ability to the Chinese until they gladly put their children with them now. He then reviewed the work of his daughter, Miss Anna Muse, Miss Dora Ran-kin. The death of Miss Dora Rankin stirred kin. The death of Miss Dora Rankin stirred the women at home, and seven women were sent out to carry forward the work. Miss Loohle Rankin has done so much that some of the most bigoted Chinese in a walled city have begged her to come and teach their children. Mrs. Campbell, late of Atlanta, is wanted all over China, because she is doing such able work for God. Miss Hamilton has such influence that she has been chosen president of a society of young literary men who debate the matters of Christianity. He is afraid that Miss Lochie Rankin, like Miss Laura Haygood, will break herself down. The cries Haygood, will break herself down. The cries of need are so great that it is impossible for the women to keep from doing too much. Miss Dr. Phillips has a hospital at Soochow. Miss Laura A. Haygood has the work well in hand, and her illness has been serious to herself and her work.

WILL VISIT MACON.

It is very likely that Justice and Mrs. Lamar will leave the city for Macon as soon after the confirmation as possible, there to remain in quiet and rest for several weeks before returning to Washington.

It will be remembered that at the time of Mr. Lamar's entrance into the cabinet, con-

Mr. Lamar's entrance into the cabinet, con-siderable doubt was expressed by his own im-mediate people as to his fitness for the office, the distance people as to his hiness for the omee, it being a question whether the temper of his mind was suited to the duties he had to perform. His success was so great that every one was fully satisfied that the talented Mississippian was equal to any emergency, and now that he has at last secured a place where every thing is congenial to his tastes, habits and life, the greatest success is prophesied for him.

In this connection, it may be interesting to state that a bill has been prepared and will be introduced at the present session increasing.

introduced at the present session increasing the salary of of the supreme court judge to $20,000, and if it succeeds in getting through, Mr. Lamar may be considered doubly fortunate.

Congressman Stewart, of the Atlanta district, had a long interview, recently, with Comptroller Trenholm, of the treasury.

Comptroller Money. TRENHOLM'S IDEAS ABOUT MONEY.

It seems that the comptroller has some new ideas that he hopes to see put into active operation, that he is sure will redound to the benefit of the country in general and the south in particular. Among other things, Mr. Trenders the seems of the country in general and the south in particular.

benefit of the country in general and the south in particular. Among other things, Mr. Trenholm wishes to see a greater amount of money in circulation. This is hardly a new idea itself, though the method he proposes to accomplish this end has not been, perhaps, mentioned before.

The comptroller is a great believer in national banks, and his idea is to secure this large circulation through the medium of national banks: what he wants is that the people organize more national banks; and he proposes that, as an inducement in aid of this object, that the law be so amended or constructed as to require a smaller amended or constructed as to require a smaller amount of bonds to be deposited by each bank, thus relieving, in a great measure, the diffiamount of bonds to be deposited by each bank, thus relieving, in a great measure, the difficulty of organization.

OBJECTIONS TO THE PLAN.

It is capitally doubted whether this plan is free from some very serious objections, but when one is informed of the earnestness and eagerness with which Mr. Trenholm advocates and maintains the plan, no doubt at all can be maintained of his sincerity. He has shown himself to be a splendid officer, and has given to the currency much study and thought and for these reasons his opinions are entitled to more than ordinary consideration.

The only bill that the Georgia delegation will introduce in the immediate future, will be the bill of Mr. Grimes, of the fourth district, to make Columbus a port of delivery, placing it on the same footing in this respect with the city of Atlanta. Mr. Grimes is hopeful that his bill will succeed in running the gauntlet, and in order that it may have an early consideration will introduce it on Monday next.

ELAINE AND HIS VIEWS.

It is surprising to hear southern democrats indorse the views of James G. Blaine, and yet that is just what a number of them have been doing very recently.

In his comments upon the president's mesdoing very recently.

In his comments upon the president's message, Mr. Blaine took a strong position in favor of the immediate abolition of the internal revenue tax upon tobacco. He argued that it would not only bring great relief to a large itself.

As for tobacco being a luxuary, the Maine statesman declares that it is as much of a necessity to thousands of men as tea and coffee and by a wise and consegvative government should be classed accordingly. He admitted that the same argument applied to the reduction of the whisky tax, though he confessed that for the good of society, it might be best to retain it.

retain it.

INDORSED BY SOME SOUTHERNERS.

Now these views of the Honorable James G. Blaine have been very cheerfully indorsed by some of the best democrats from the south, who come from districts directly concerned in the production of tobacco. And these same democrats agree with the Maine man about whisky too, but differ with him in his moral view of the severe of the creation.

view of the aspect of the question.

The wool growers and manufacturers here, representing over five hundred millions of dollars, and over one million of people, formally protested against the free trade theories of the president's message, and in a well considered paper demonstrated the tremendous injury such a tariff as the president recommends, would work to that enormous industry.

The truth of the matter is that there are were objections only in the truth of the matter.

more objections coming in just now to the message than are generally made public, and the prophesy made the day the message was read that it would cause more comment than any other state paper, has been abundantly verified so far.

HON. J. G. BLAINE.

Speaking of Blaine, I heard the other day a right curious sort of remark about him, one giving an entirely different insight into the man's character than that the public generally

The speaker was a well known republican member from Pennsylvania, and he solumnly affirmed that he did not honestly believe that Blaine would accept the republican nomination again if it was tendered to him in a silver waiter.

The opinion was emphasized by the additional statement that Blaine would not accept tional statement that Blaine would not accept it even if it was tendered in a spirit of vindica-tion or justification; that he was a man of too much delicacy, too much refinement and sen-sibility to become the second time the standard bearer of a party that had so badly used him once before.

"And mark my words," continued the Pennsylvanian, "if Jim Blaine is apparently saying neither nay or yea about the matter, his mind is well made up, and if he continues to keep quiet about it, it will be for the purpose of having an opportunity of dignifiedly refusing the nomination, if it is tendered him."

The impression created by the remark was as refreshing as a sea breeze in August.

In as much as the present congress will not have before it any contested election cases of any importance, the place of chairman of the committee on elections will be robbed of much committee on elections will be robbed of much of its importance and dignity.

"HON. H. G. TURNER.

Hon. Henry G. Turner of the 2nd Georgia district, who has so acceptably and so honorably filled that place heretofore, will in all probability be transferred to the ways and means commmittee, admitted to be perhaps the most important in the house. No man from the south in as short a time has made the name and place that Mr. Turner has. He is respected and admired by his demoratic colleagues for his prudent, cautious, con-He is respected and admired by his demo-cratic colleagues for his prudent, cautious, con-servative temper and disposition, and for his able conduct on many trying occasions, where he demonstrated his powers as a leader and a de-bator, and he has the unchallenged admiration and sincere commendation of the republican members for his eminent fairness and justice in the discharge of his duty.

It is likely that he will be placed on the ways and means committee, but wherever he is sta-tioned he will fill, ably and conscientiously, the duties before him.

OFFICE SEEKERS HERE. There are comparatively very few office seekers from Georgia and the south here so far this session. The congressmen declare that they are almost overrun with applications, but they are discovered in that they are are almost overrun with applications, but they are exceedingly fortunate in that they are spared the trouble, expense and presence of the applicants. The state will not have much patronage under the house this session for the reason that most of the members went down with Donelson, the ex-doorkeeper, whose office has the greater share of places. Messrs. Barnes, Norwood and Clements, who supported Hurt, will doubtless fare better than their colleagues, and will have much better context. colleagues, and will have much better opportunities in placing some of their unfortunat friends.

The Hancock Contest. The Hancock Contest.

Spacial, Ga. December 10.—[Special.]—The prohibition contest over the election held in Hancock county, on the 25th ultimo, terminated this afterneon, though the court adjourned without declaring the result. It is believed, however, that Judge Lewis will declare in favor of anti-prohibitionists. If he does the other side will certainly appeal.

THREE PISTOL SHOTS Ring Out in the French Chamber of Deputies. ATTEMPT TO ASSASSINATE M. FERRY Arrest of the Assassin-Efforts to Lynch the Miscreant-Ferry Slightly Wounded-

Other Foreign News Paris, December 10.-M. Jules Ferry was fired at three times this afternoon by a man in the lobby of the chambers of deputies. There is great excitement and details of the shooting are not yet obtainable, but it is reported that Berckeins Aubertin is a native of Rombac Moselle. When he made the attack on M. Ferry he was accompanied by an accomplice who was to have shot M. Goblet, but who failed, giving as his reason that his revolver dropped to the floor. When Aubertin was searched by the police, a paper was found on him which indicated that he and his confederates had drawn lots yesterday to decide who should do the shooting. The paper ends:

"Death to the intriguers! Our path is marked out to form an intelligent, disinterested and patriotic ministry. So be it."

ministry. So be it."

In consequence of the attempt upon the life of M. Ferry, there were many heated quarrels in the lobbies of the chamber of deputies, between the moderates and radicals. M. Rouvier joined in the discussion, accusing the radicals of provoking weak minded persons to deeds of violence. Several scuffles ensued, and it is expected they will lead to duels.

IN THE VORTEX.

A Distinguished Georgian and His Experi-ence in Paris Under the Commune. Judge John Erskine, of this city, has had an experience visited upon onle a few men.

During our civil war he bore his part as good citizen, a lawyer holding a distinguished position at the bar. Later, as is well known, he occupied the responsible and honorable position of United States district judge for the northern district of Georgia. During one of his vacations he found himself in Paris, at a time when Minister E. B. Wash-burne was in the most desperate straits, endeavoring not only to protect the rights of American citizens, but also to look after the poor German residents who were left friendless. Judge Erskine never courted notoriety, and in upholding the hands of Minister burne, at no little peril to himself, he thought of nothing but the honor of the country

What Minister Washburne thought of the judge's support is best shown by the following extract from Mr. Washburne's valuable work extract from Mr. Washburne's valuable work in two volumes, entitled "Recollections of a Minister to France," published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Mr. Washburne, in the course lof his interesting work, says: "We have room for only the following extract from his diurnal of the 3rd of September, 1870:"

er, 1870:"
"After dinner my son and myself went down to the Hotel de la Place du Palais Royal to call on Judge John Erskine, of the United States district court for Georgia, who was then visit-ing Paris with his daughter. When we came ing Paris with his daughter. When we came out there was quite a crowd in the Rue Rivoli, bawling for Trochu and demanding the republic, and as it was in the street opposite the hotel and looking a little threatening, I suggested to the judge that he and his beautiful daughter should come to my house for protection, where they are now. At half-past eleven the judge and myself took an open voiture and rode into the heart of the city to see what was going on. We found large crowds of excited men on the boulevards, but no very serious demonstration."

He then adds: "Judge Erskine has since then sent me the following reminiscences of those exciting days."

At present we have room for only one of Judge Erskine's sketches—A Visit to the Inner Boulevards.

"I, also, call to mind an excursion we made,

"I, also, call to mind an excursion we made, to the inner boulevard:, on the memorable night of Sep'ember 3, 1870. About 11 o'clock you said to me: "Let us go and see the revolution, for it is nothing less." Curious as Mr. Pepys, I replied: 'Lead on.' Not flesirous I presume to use your own carriage, you ordered Antoine—that man of many tongues—to call a fiacre or voiture. He on the box with the coachman, away we sped to the Place de la Concorde; but there the press was too dense for us to pass to the Rue Royal, so we took the Rue Boissy d'Angles and the Rue Pasquier to the Boulevard Haussmann, and, turning to the right, drove to the Rue Taitbout and into the Boulevard des Italiens; thence along it the Boulevard des Italiens; thence along it and the Boulevard Montmartre to the Rue du Faubourg Montmartre, and drew rein at the corner of the Boulevard Poissionniere, you sending Antoine with the fiacre to the Cite Bergere for safety until our return. We then walked along the Boulevards Poissionniere and Bonne-Nouville to within sixty paces of the Porte St. Denis, and there took post under a bright gaslight, to await the coming of the procession of citizens. who, we learned, was a bright gaslight, to await the coming of the procession of citizens, who, we learned, was forming on the Boulevard de la Madeleine, and also to observe the denoument; to witness whether the military, whose drums we heard in the direction of St. Lazare and the canal de St. Denis, would oppose the march. It was but a brief while after we had albested our westiten until we described a dark march. It was but a brief while after we had selected our position until we descried a dark mass approaching from the Boulevard des Italiens, its front filled that grand thorough-fare from troittoir to troittoir; and as the head of the column approached us, we could clearly see and scan the faces of the processionists, maniliness of part, steadiness of purpose, and decision were manifest, no childish effusion or indecorum was to be seen. The great number of these citizens was evidently of the better class—traders, mechanics, merchants and pegsons of the effusion or indecorum was to be seen. The great number of these citizens was evidently of the better class—traders, mechanics, merchants and persons of the learned professions; some wore the sash of office, some the ribbon of the Legion of Honor. Intermixed were men in blouses, zouaves, chasseurs d'Africa, soldiers of the line, women and gamins. The head of the column passed us, and when near the Rue du Faubourg St. Denis, it seemed to vibrate—soon it paused, and then halted; for doubtless soldiers were seen, or their tramp heard advancing on the Porte St. Denis. But no face blanched. Not endowed with prescience, none could divine whether impending danger hovered around them; or if they proceeded, the instant they might be taken in flank, and riddled into eternity;—and many of these must have remembered the second of December! Presently infantry entered from the Porte St. Denis, deepening their ranks as they came on the boulevard, the head of the column passing over, and resting just within the Rue St. Denis, thus barring any advance of the citizens. Quickly following this movement, a body of infantry emerged from the Boulevard de Strasbeurg, and cavalry from the Porte St. Martin, and marching across the Boulevards St. Denis and St. Martin to the trottoir, halted. While the procession remained near the Rue du Faubourg St. Denis, scores of its members broke ranks, and spread themselves upon the sidewalk or trottoirs obscuring our view to such an extent, that I could no longer distinctly see the rank and file; but the mounted officers and troops were still discernible. Yet, notwithstanding this impediment, twice or thrice, I caught glimpses of the men, through momentary openings, (for I was intently astute on discovery); but the chassepots at shoulder, and their fixed syord bayonets, glistening as the light danced upon them, were clearly visible. When the troops entered the boulevard from the Porte St. Denis, the citizens leading in the procession, with one accord and with outstretched arms, offered fraternal wel whether the citizens and soldiers passed the time in conference, fraterization, or how otherwise. At length, still another command; and the bayonets—bright and bloodless—sprang to view, the drums beat, the soldiers faced to the head of the column, and marched toward the Seine and the Boulevard St. Michel. When the encumbers of the trottoirs had returned to the procession, and the military had crossed the boulevard and disappeared in the Rue St. Denis, we could see the distant troops—foot and horse—winding their way in the direction of the Boulevard du Temple. The procession moved on; and joy abounded apace; but soon countenances became sombre, then anger and hatred arose, for the people remembered the coup d'etat, remembered Thiers, Hugo, Lamoriciere, and forgot the new Paris, although it was around them! As the vast column proceeded, denunciatory cries were voiced aloud; and there was one—the last—more portentious and appalling still, and, to my mind it flew in material shave last—more portentious and appalling still, and, to my mind, it flew in material shape from the front to the far, far near, rending the imperial structure: Decheance, Decheance, Decheance! It thrills me to this hour. You were right, my friend, "It was a revolution and nothing less."

True, though strange, that during these cenes, the catastrophe of Sedan was unknown scenes, the catastrophe of Sedan was unknown to the people of Paris.

The following day, amid thousands and thousands of people, I stood upon that historic spot—the old Place de Greve—in front of the Hotel de Ville, and, looking up at an open window, I saw the tri-color and Gambetta; and at the moment I beheld the national flag and the man, the regime of the coup d'etat toppled and crumbled to dust. Then arose the gladdening shout 'Vive la Republique.' I thought to myself, La chaine est brisce, and came away."

A BABE IN COURT.

Affecting Scene in the Harper Embezzle-

CINCINNATI, December 10.—Dramatic scene in the Harper trial this morning kept the crowd in the court room in a hush of silence Court was opened in the usual way. Harper appeared, accompanied by his wife and her sister and his little boy, a fine looking fellow of nine years. The testimony for the defense was virtually nothing. J. C. Larkin, banker, was called to show that Wilshire was buying wheat for others than Harper, but all he could say was that his bank handled some paper of Timberlake's with an indorsement by Wilshire, and the court ruled it all out as incompetent.

Timberlake himself was called. He said
Wilshire never bought for him nor Wilshire.
Wilshire had simply indorsed some of his paper. Mr. Blackburn said his purpose was to show that Wilshire's testimony, that he had to show that wishire's testimony, that he had bought for Harper only was not true.

The court reminded counsel that Wilshire had testified that he had a million bushels on his own account, and if they could show that he bought more than this, it might be done. Vitness was excused.

Edward Stark, bank cashier, was called to tell of Timberlake's transaction, but it was ruled out and Mr. Blackburn said: "With that ruling of court we have no further testimony."

Harper and his counsel withdrew for consulration, Deputy Marshai Turner followed. In ten minutes, Mrs. Harper was called out. The consultation was upon the question of submit ting the case without argument. At 10:45 the parties all returned and Mrs. Harper was carrying her baby. She sat down beside her husband with the child on her knee, removed its white hood and displayed a lovely head and face, fair hair, bright eyes, fine com-plexion and full, round cheeks. There was a whispered conversation at the table for a minute or two, during which, above the low hum of the crowd, could be heard the flute like tones of the baby's voice as it reached to the table after papers and cooed its delight. It was the only plea that was offered for its father, for when Mr. Blackburn arose he said that under the ruling of court, as to the evi-dence offered, they had no more witnesses to offer.

The government called Messrs. Hinch and Hayes, but the questions asked them had been asked before, and they were ruled out. Mr. Burnett then said the government would rest. Judge Jackson—Will you argue the case?

Judge Wilson, for the defense, said they would submit without argument if the government would.

ernment would.

Mr. Burnett—We will.

Judge Jackson then charged the jury they retired. Recess was then taken till At a quarter of five court adjourned till Monday. The verdict will not be received un-til Monday morning, no matter when the jury

A STARTLING DISCOVERY. Chicago Jall Officials Find One of Their Prisoners with Pistol and Ammunition. CHICAGO, December 10.-Officials of the county jail are in almost a frenzy of fear and uncertainty over disclosures regarding the sur-reptitous possession of contraband articles by uncertainty over disclosures regarding the surreptitous possession of contraband articles by the prisoners. The finding of bombs in Lingg's cell has never been traced to its depth. Neither have the persons been discovered who furnished several doses of poison taken by George Engle. On Saturday last, a forty-four calibre revolver and over one hundred cartridges were found in the cell of Michael Lynch, who shot and killed Officer William S. Halloran, in July last, and last evening it was learned that the latter discovery prevented the carrying out of a well defined plot to liberate half a dozen of the worst criminals in jail. Immediately on the finding of the revolver and ammunition by Jailer Folz, Lynch was taken from his cell and placed in solitary confinement for over one hundred hours, manacled to the cell door and fed on bread and water. All the details have been suppressed by the jail officials, but it is known that the plan was to arm Lynch and a number of other prisoners, and getting them into the lawyer's cage on some pretense, have them all make a combinate head for liberty shooting down the guards ome pretense, have them all make a combin ed break for liberty, shooting down the guards

BARREL FACTORY BURNED.

A Large Philadelphia Manufactory Destroyed-Other Fires. RHILADELPHIA, Pa., December 10.—William G. Pennypacker's extensive barrel factory, at 23d and Washington avenue, was totally destroyed by fire between four and five o'clock this morning, together with valuable machinery, a large stock of lumber, finished barrels and staves. The loss will probably exceed $100,000. Twenty-five horses were stabled in rear of the building, but all were rescued from the burning building by policemen and citizens. Two policemen were severely, though not dangerously, burned while engaged in rescuing the animals. The fire originated in the drying kiln of the establishment. It burned with great flerceness and caused great excitement among the occupants of a number of small dwelling houses at the side and rear of the burning building. Many removed their effects to the street. Several of the dwellings were scorched or slightly burned, but none seriously damaged. Three hundred men are thrown out of employment by the burning of the factory. BHILADELPHIA, Pa., December 10.-William the factory. Cotton Report from New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, La., December 10.—[Special.]—The better feeling prevailing is shown by the action of the several markets today: Liverpool opened about the same as last night, but fimmediatedly advanced 2-64, New York was a little better at the openings, an improvement of which was soon lost and almost provement of which was soon lost and almost as soon regained, and advanced 6 points above yesterday, our market following, but during the dull afternoon, we sold off a couple of points before the close. We cannot fail to take cognizance of the universal reports from the country, to factors generally, as well as from our correspondents, all to the effect that 75 or 80 per cent of this crop has been already marketed. If this unprecedented state of affairs is confirmed comment is simply unnecessary.

Increase in Overland Shipments. NEW ORLEANS, December 10 .- The Cotton NEW ORLEANS, December 10.—The Cotton World today says the details of overland shipments of cotton direct to the mills across the Ohio, Mississippi and Potomac rivers indicate a movement commensurate with the remarkably rapid movement of the crop to the scaboard. Direct shipments by rail during November have never been exceeded in volume during any one month. Net movement for November was 25,607 bales, against 157,021 last year and 107,075 the year before. Total overland morement for the quarters, in round figures, 124,000 bales larger than last year, and 94,606 greater than the pieceding season. This befug the total amount of cotton appearing at seaboard and points of crossing on the Ohio, Mississippi and Petomac rivers for the first quarter of the year to 3,503,575, an increase over last season 885,000 bales. A LIVELY SCENE.

Thirty Persons Locked Up for Drunkenness Last Night.

MANY BLOODY FIGHTS TAKE PLACE.

The Police Kept Busy Making Arrests-A Negro Tries to Kill His Wife-Two Burglars Caught.

The stationhouse presented a remarkable pectacle last night. It was a veritable panlemonium. Shortly after dark the telephone began ringing and the call officer was kept basy dispatching officers to various parts of the city in response to the summons through the 'phone. It took most of the time of Dr. Foute to receive the prisoners and book their names and offenses. So many cases were re-corded that the last pages of the record book were covered by 10 o'clock, and a new book was opened. Before 2 o'clock this morning two pages of this book were covered with the names of persons arrested and brought to the station house in a state of helpless intoxica-tion. From dark to midnight, twenty-eight cases of drunk and disorderly had been booked. Most of the men were colored, but a number of white men were given a cell for the night. The drunks did not come in the category of "harmless," for two-thirds of the ine-briates had bleeding noses and smashed heads. They must have imbibed a wild and fiery brand of liquor, for nearly every one of then brand of liquor, for nearly every one of them was imbued with a pugnacious disposition which would not tamely submit to arrest. The policemen had a very hard time. They were several times forced to use their clubs to bring some desperate fellow to a state of submission. Blood about the police headquarters was plentiful, and curses and vile epithets filled the building. The scene was one which it would require a graphic pen to 'properly describe. During the night several prominent prohibibitionists visited the station house to take a look at the docket. These prohibitionists, as bitionists visited the station house to take a look at the docket. These prohibitionists, as each drunken man was brought in, made remarks about the effects of anti-prohibition. To these remarks Mr. Walter R. Brown, who chanced to be present, would reply: "This is under a prohibition regime. We have not started our restrictive plan yet. Just wait until we get things in shape and you won't see anything like this." Captain Couch, Chief Connolly, Captain Crim, Dr. Foute and others were asked what caused so remarkable an outburst of drunkenness, and their answers were pretty much the same. They were to the were pretty much the same. They were to the effect that dealers were selling whisky by the quart and gallon yesterday in an unlicensed way. It was learned that some five or six dealers were actually selling liquor by the quart and gallon, and that one of them sold in this way shout four barrels yesterday. These deal-ers claim that they violate no law in thus sell-ing liquor. ing liquor, for at present no city license is re-quired and the prohibition law is not in force. No cases were made against these sellers, and it is said that it is not likely they will be prose-had their hands full. In front of two bawdy houses in Bartow street a big crowd was collected yesterday morning and there was a great deal of confusion. Brewer was smashing things to pieces and the women were terrified and screaming for help. The man was uproariously drunk and he acted like a maniac. He broke down two doors, and was in the act of carrying on his work of demolition when his sport was cut short by the arrival of two officers. Policeman English went up to the man and tried to induce him to stop his outrageous behavior. Brewer turned upon the policeman and fought him furiously. Other officers came to the rescue and succeeded in bringing the desperate fighter to the stationhouse. It was no easy rescue and succeeded in bringing the desperate fighter to the stationhouse. It was no easy job, however. After reaching the stationhouse Brewer was Itaken out the "black maria" and he walked without resistance toward the building. After reaching the door he put one hand in his pocket and caught his pistol, and tried to shoot through his pocket. One of the men was too quick for him and grabbed his arm. Had the officer been a second later doubtless Mr. Hudson, the assistant stationhouse keeper, would have been killed. Brewer was relieved of his weapon and given a cell. A state case will be made against him.

The Unnatural Mother.

Yesterday morning some ladies of the be-evolent home read the account in THE Conresterday morning some ladies of the benevolent home read the account in The Constitution of the depraved woman, Louise Hughes, and her daughter. Their sympathies for the little girl were aroused and they went to Chief Connolly and got possession of the child. She was at once placed in the Marietta street home, and proceedings were instituted to dispossess the unnatural and depraved mother of her child. The mother was released from custody, and Ordinary Calhoun was notified that a writ of habeas corpus would be sued out before him Monday morning. An effort will in that way be made to place the little girl beyond the reach of Louise Hughes. The child intelligent. She wears, however, an expression that indicates a maturity far beyond her years.

The health of the little girl has been impaired, and she is now under the treatment of a physician. The mother is a character well-known all over Atlanta. She was formerly in good circumstances, and lived a sort of respetable life, but of late was read to be been an abandoned character. It years she has been an abandoned character. It was not thought previous to this that she was vicious or dissolute. But the manner in which she treated her child proves her to be devoid of any maternal feeling and lost to all feeling of self-respect. It has not yet been de-termined whether or not she will be prosecuted or what is the charge to be brought against her. The case is one of the saddest recorded in the criminal annals of Atlanta. A Stabbing Affray. A colored woman named Julia Jones, who lives near the corner of Jackson and Houston streets, came to the carshed last night in search of her son, who she heard was about to leave the city for Macon. While coming up Wheat street she stopped in a store to ask after her son, and was informed he had just been there and said he was going back home. She retraced her steps, and when near the house came upon two persons who seemed to be in a fierce fight. One of them, she said, was her son. She parted them and the other man ran away. When she reached home she found that her son was stabbed in two places. She sought a physician, who decided that the cuts did not amount to much. The man who did the cutting is Jim Rollison, who lives near the glass works. A warrant wil be taken out Monday for his arresi. A colored woman named Julia Jones, who

About a quarter past 1 o'clock this morning several young men were going down Pryor street toward their homes. They had been drinking freely and were in a quarrelsome smood. When they reached Peters street they ran against a colored man who was as drunk as they were. He happened to brush against one of the young men when two of the others struck him at the same instant felling him to the earth. He was knocked senseless his head striking a stone as he hit the ground. The young men hurried off and a little later the negro was taken by an officer. He resisted violently and tried to get away. One of the men was forced to use his club on the desperate fellow. About a quarter past 1 o'clock this morning

Burglars Caught.

Officers Bedford and Cason captured Davis Chatman and Will Moore, two colored men, who burglarized the store of Mr. Miles, on who burglarized the store of Mr. Miles, on Marietta street. The two men entered the store late night before last, and carried off a quantity of goods. Detectives were set to work and speedly gained a clue, which was followed up successfully. Yesterday afternoon, Officers Cason and Bedford caught the negroes near Bellwood. They were tracked to their home and some of the stolen goods were recovered. The two burglars were given calls in the stationhouse last night, and a state case was booked against them.

Two Hard Cases.

About 7 o'clock last night Tom Weaver and Mary Davis, two disreputable colored people who live near the corner of Ivy and Decature streets, got into a fight and the noise drew several hundred people to the spot. They were taken to the stationhouse and fought like wild cats the officers who arrested them. They were bloody, and when they reached police headquarters renewed their quarreling and resisted the officers to the last extremity.

Two Young Men.

Two young men, who declined to give their names, one about twelve years old and the other some three years his senior, were taken to police headquarters late last night in a merry condition. A party of boys and young men had bought a quart of Catawba wine from the Markham house, and the young fellows got pretty full. While in this condition they became so noisy that an officer felt justified in taking them in. They seemed penitent, but were detained so that they might sober up.

Yesterday morning Recorder Anderson called the case of disorderly conduct against Mr. Humphreys Castleman and Mr. Harry C. Stockdale. The case was postponed until next

Where the Best Tobacco is Made.

Among the visitors to the city yesterday was Mr. D. W. Spencer, junior member of the firm of D. H. Mr. Spencer resides about 40 miles from Danville, and was in the city on business connected with his firm.

"I will say this about the internal revenue "I will say this about the internal revenus business," said Mr. Spencer, in response to an inquiry about how the people of Virginis felt towards the president's message. "Any party that attempts to carry that law will not be able to carry Virginia. I have had no time to even read the message, and no time to talk with the people about it, but I know the temper of the people about this law, and there is no doubt whatever."

"Was it in any way an issue in the last congressional campaign?"
"Not directly; but in all the congressional races prior to the last the republican party was carrying the internal revenue laws. General Cabell, one of the most popular men in our section, had promised our people for twelve years to have their lands repealed. He fought them vigorously in his campaign speeches, and carried the district in previous campaigns by large majorities, as high as forty-five hundred. In the last campaign his opponent came squarely out on this issue, and claimed that General Chad been tried for twelve years and failed. As a republican he claimed he could aid in it, and do more than had been done, and he was elected by thirty-five hundred majority over General Cabell. So you see the way a change of about do more than had been done, and he was elected by thirty-five hundred majority over General Cabell. So you see the way a change of about eight thousand votes in one district, and just following the election of a democratic president."

"There is no use talking," he continued.

"There is no use talking," ne continued.
"There are thousands of good democrats in Virginia who will not vote for any party that indorses this outrageous law. The reason is plain—this law taxes one of the main products of our soil eight cents per pound, and handicaps our farmers that much in competing with other countries that raise tobacco. Sugar is increase much a luvury as tobacco. Suppose just as much a luxury as tobacco. Sugar is just as much a luxury as tobacco. Suppose the democratic party were to favor a tax of even one cent per pound on sugar. Can any sane man believe that Louisiana and other sugar growing states would vote for the party that favored such a tax?"

ing states would vote for the party that favored such a tax?"
"Mr. Spencer knows what he is talking about," said Mr. William A. Russell, the wholesale tobacco dealer, who was present during the interview. "And he has got it down about the way all these Virginians talk. I deal with quite a number of them."

Mr. Spencer's father, D. H. Spencer, originated the brand of Calhoun tobacco, and before the days of railroads, and years ago, would bring this tobacco in wagons all the way from Virginia, and sell it through South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi The old man is now seventy-one years old and is quite active. He commenced making this brand "Calhoun" fifty years ago and it is famous now all over the United States. Only a Hmited quantity is made, and he supplies his regular customers by giving them an allowance each year. Henry county is famous for its fine tobacco. Mr. Spencer, in answer to a question content the kind of tabacco the Calhoun is medical. about the kind of tobacco the Calhoun is made from, said: "It is made from tobacco grown exclusively in Henry county. The soil and cli-mate is pecularly adapted to this tobacco. The seed we plant is the Little Oronco. We The seed we plant is the Little Oronoco. We have been planting this kind for years, and it has been demonstrated that this seed makes the finest flavored tohacco. The tobacco, when gathered from the farm, is carefully picked by a man who has been engaged in the business for thirty-five years, and it is then put away and is not ready for smoking until the following June or July."

Mr. Spencer reports the tobacco crop of this year good, but not above the average.

THE SCHOOL TEACHER.

Mr. Kinnebrew Makes a Statement About the Trouble. There are no new developments in the Ivy There are no new developments in the Ivy street school trouble.

The children who were seen seemed to regard the affair as a first-rate joke. They say they did not like Mr. Kinnebrew, and wanted to get rid of him. They think that his methods are not in keeping with the government which obtains in the other city schools. Some of the older pupils admit that Mr. Kinnebrew is a man of considerable ability.

Mr. Kinnebrew could not be found by any of The Constitution reporters, but he sent to the office the subjoined communication, and requested that it be published:

Enfrons Constitutions: The account of the difficulty at Ivy street school contained in your issue of yesterday is incorrect, and unfair to the boys as well as to myself. It will create the impression on the public mind that all the boys of my grade were in a state of open rebellion in the school room, which is not true. I did punish a boy with moderation for leaving the room without my permission and he resisted me by clinebing me. I threw him on the floor and after striking him twice with a switch he summoned another boy to his aid but the latter after showing some little inclination to participate, desisted. Neither one of these by struck me at all. The rest of the boys did not interfere in the difficulty either directly or indirectly. After I dismissed school and was engaged in my school room making out my report, I was informed that the boys of my grade had met on Ivy street, not far from the school house and arned themselves with rocks, knives, etc., with the intention of returning to the school grounds to attack me. I went down the street in a walk to the house nearest the school house to ask the gentleman who lived there to aid me in suppressing disorder on the school grounds, should it become necessary; his wife inf r.ned me that he was not at home, and I returned the way I went. Looking up Ivy street I discovered that the boys had disbanded, and here the matter ended. There was no running in the transaction on either side, for the simple reason that there was nothing to run from, No one threw at me, nor drev a knift on me, nor offered me any violence in any manner or form whatever. My resignation was not suggested by Major Slaton, but tendered by myself vountarily; it was not prompted by the occurrence of yesterday, but had been detormined on before, for reasons best known to myself.

Mr. Kinnebrew's successor will be elected by the school board at its next meeting. EDITORS CONSTITUTION: The account of the diffi-

THE CONSTITUTION,

Atlanta, Georgia.

ATLANTA, GA., DECEMBER 11, 1887. A Rold Rut Useless Kick. The Kansas City Times protests against the recent decision of the federal supreme court, declaring that a state has the right to wipe out saloons, distilleries and breweries, without paying the owners a cent of dam-The Times admits that the decision may be law, but complains that it is not justice, and goes on to say that such measures are very much like confiscation.

It is useless to overhaul the supreme court, and attempt to argue 'he case with it at this late day. The argument is exhausted. The decision has been delivered and is the law of the land.

Perhaps, after all, this sweeping decision will not have the effect anticipated by some of the prohibitionists. In all probability it will cause the liquor men in every state to organize for defense, and make a better fight than they would have made if they had not known the full extent of the danger threatening them.

The opponents of proh b tion will now understand the consequences of defeat, and in future their struggle will be no half-way fight. Men knowing that their property is at stake will go into the contest with gloves off, and draw upon all the wisdom that is born of self-interest, and all the desperation that goes with a last chance.

Taking this view of it, the decision may not help the cause of prohibition. It may nerve the opposition to redouble its energies and put forth the efforts of a giant. But it will take several more campaigns in some localities before a conclusion can be reached.

THE defeat of Senator Brown and Hon. N. J. Hammond by the city council for members of the board of education, was not due to prohibition or anti-prohibition. It resulted from the most bare-faced nepotism. Some members of the present council have made an unparalleled record on this line.

Another Chapter of French Politics. The shooting of Jules Ferry in the French parliament, yesterday, is not a new chapter in the history of French polities, but it will alarm some timed people on this side of the

So long as men are permitted to carry pistols, there is no safety for public men, rulers, and the governing classes.

Dynamite is unnecessary. A desperate revolutionist may without a moment's warning plunge a whole nation into a turmoil not to be recovered from in many a year.

What has occurred in France may occur here. The fact that we live under a good government does not enter into the considration of the question. There is only one thing to be considered, and that is the hippocket nuisance. So long as men carry pistols in their hip-pockets they are ready for just such deeds as the affair reported from the French chamber of deputies.

It is evident, therefore, that we need something more than a crusade against dynamiters. These fellows with their loaded hip-pockets are infinitely worse. They are able at any moment to remove the head of the nation, or a leading statesman. These are the outlaws to be guarded against.

It is a question whether the so called French crisis will result in the return of Boulanger to power.

Halstead in Georgia.

The National Republican, an obscure country paper printed in Washington, has taken up Editor Halstead's views about the nullification of the constitution in Georgia, and is pressing them on the attention of its readers with a great quantity of small shot paragraphs.

The Republican is weak enough and fool-1sh enough to steal Halstead's ideas bodily, which are to the effect that every fifth negro enumerated in the census ought not only to vote, but ought to vote the republican ticket. But this is not all. Every fifth negro enumerated in the census ought not only to vote the republican ticket, but he ought to vote the republican ticket whether there is a republican ticket to be voted or not.

This is a very fine scheme indeed and all that is needed to carry it out is for Editor Halstead to turn his editorial columns over to the tender mercies of Deacon Richard Smith and visit Georgia on a missionary tour. We need but say that Editor Halstead would be greeted with open arms. He would be the means of stirring up the entire state, for, to the extent that he enthused republicans to that extent would be enthuse democrats, and the democratic majority in Georgia is something tremendous when its full strength is brought out. What we ardently desire is to see its full strength brought out. Will Editor Halstead be kind enough to come and help us in this desperate business? As a mere matter of form it would be well for Brother Blaine to come out and accept the republican nomination. Delays are always unnecessary and often frivolous.

The Root of Anarchy. Mr. Maurice Thompson, the well known writer, has a theory of his own in regard to the rapid spread of anarchist and socialistic ideas in this country during the past twenty He is of the opinion that this growth is directly due to the competitive efforts of the piratical publishers to deluge the United States with cheap foreign litera-

There may be something in this, for the American book pirates have been engaging in this sort of competition for many yearsand to such an extent that even respectable bookstores are compelled to fill their counters with the cheap foreign trash which is issued by the million here. What Mr. Thompson has to say may be gathered from the closing paragraph of his article: With our gates wide open to immigration, and with a standing premium offered on allen influences in our literature and our art, with our bookstalls domineered over by ten-cent stolen editions of pessimistic and nihilistic books of foreign authorable, with our critics singing peans to communistic hovels, and with our pulpits believing advantion of roisti and Turgeneff and the rest, who shall wonde that anarchy dares to lay its train and explode its bomb in our midst?

There may be some exaggeration about this, but there is no doubt that Mr. Thompson's argument is worthy of consideration. Cheap literature, when it is cheap in quality and cheap in price, is conceded to be not only unwholesome, but absolutely damaging to the public morals. We are at great pains to supervise the literature which we provide for our children, but here are the moral pirates in New York and elsewhere providing a child-like and half-uneducated public with unlimited quantities of the cheapest and most vicious literature im-

This half-educated public is provided with the filthy results of Zola's pen, and with the pessimism, nihilism and anarchism to be found in the works of the Russian barbarians who have taken to novel-writing. In addition to this, we must bear in mind that thousands of uneducated anarchists flock to these shores every month in the year, and they are reinforced here by the thousands that feed on the vicious literature which the moral pirates of the United States provide them.

So far as international copyright is concerned, there is this much to be said: Some of the moral pirates who pretend to be in favor of international copyright have paid agents at Washington who are instructed to lobby against any reasonable measure in that direction.

Meanwhile, it is safe to say that southern congressmen are practically solid in favor of any measure that the American copyright league will indorse.

BANKER HARPER appears to have as big mouth as Foraker. The big mouth is evidently an Ohio disease.

Here Are the Figures.

The Darien Gazette says it would like to know how much money THE CONSTITUTION made out of the prohibition and anti-prohibition campaign.

Well, the Gazette shall know. It is clever paper and shall not seek knowledge in vain when we can prevent it.

The books of the anti campaign commit tee will show that from first to last it paid THE CONSTITUTION $1,676. The books of the prohibition committee will show that it paid THE CONSTITUTION $1,371. Total $3,047. No more, no less.

The books of the two campaign committees will show that the four principal proprietors of THE CONSTITUTION contributed in cash to the campaign fund considerably more than the total amount paid to the paper by the two committees.

THE CONSTITUTION therefore did the work for nothing and paid right sharp for the priviledge of being allowed to do it.

THERE is something of a quarrel over the figures of the cotton crop. But no matter. The farmer will get left as usual.

The Woolfolk Case.

The prosecution of Tom Woolfolk has not made as strong a case against the prisoner as the public expected. The sum of it seems to be this: It is said that Tom was angry with h's people, that he had threatened them, and that he had said he would some time own the whole property; that he was in the house when the murder occurred; that he gave the alarm; that his clothes were bloody, and the print of a bloody hand was seen on his thigh. The defense replies with testimony that he was not angry with his people; that his clothes were bloodied when he went into the room to see what had happened, when he walked through blood 'so that it squshed up through his toes" as he described it, and that the print of the bloody hand on his thigh was that of his

Departing from this, the defense is laboring to produce some one who shall stand in the prisoner's place as the murderer. The ot negro. Jack Dubose, is already disposed of. John Jeff, the negro partially identified by Mr. Pennington as a negro who was mad with the Woolfolks, does not promise much more definite results. The truth is, the belief that Woolfolk is the murderer is practically universal. It is more than a belief. It is a conviction, almost without dissent. But there is a general impression that the prosecution has not made out the clear, closely linked, compact, technical case that will lead a jury to con demn a man to death. A Scotch verdiet of "not proven" is the best Tom Woolfolk can hope for. He must wear the suspicion of this murder through life, even if it does not carry him to the gallows-unless some miracle shall disclose at once another sus pect and irresistible proof that his was the

What I meant to say was this: Now that prohibition has been defrated in Atlanta, the danger is that "in the recoil" matters may go, tot the other extreme and the city be again dotted over with barrooms. It is quite apparent now how real was and is the danger. I earnestly hope that all conservative and right thinking men will sauction and sustain the efforts of those members of the city council who wisely and justly seek to reduce the barroom evil to the lowest possible point which the present state of the law will allow.

GEORGE HILLYER. The Athens Election-Card From Senator

The Athens Election—Card From Senator Pope Barrow.

ATHENS, Ga., December 9.—Editors Constitution: A couple of dispatches from this place to The Constitution relating to the recent contest for mayor and aldermen are calculated to place Hon. R. B. Russell in a wrong light. It can not be fairly said that he and Mr. E. T. Erown, the present accomplished solicitor general, and to there it was simply a contest between measured of the flodgson and borsey, and was decisive only of the respective attength, and not that of Meser Brown and Russell Many of the frience of the latter were supporters of Hodgson, myss among the number. It happened that the fortun of this local war threw Mesers, Russell and Brown on opposite sides, but this fact possesses no sign on opposite sides, but this fact possesses no sign on opposite sides, but this fact possesses no sign on opposite sides. on opposite sides; but this fact possesses no significance so far as their contest for solitor-general is concerned. The triumph of Mr. Hedgson is due to causes wider and lying far deeper than any concett between candidates for any other office. The warm support given by Mr. Kussell to Mr. Dorsey was due to the feeling of gratitude he felt for past favors of a similar nature which had placed him under obligations to him which he felt he could not forget or ignore. Perhaps, in the heat of the campaign. Mr. Russell may have acted sometimes Indiscreetly, but who does not do so under similar circumstances?

I write this from a sense of obligation myself to Mr. Russell, which impels me to act towards him from precisely the same spirit that animated him in befriending Dorsey. Yours truly,

The Most Successful Southern Writer. Richard Henry Stoddard in N. Y. Mail and Express

If Edgar Allen Poe were living today, as the might be if he had been less thirsty, or ha earned to manage his thirst better, and if he were of the same mind that he appeared to be when he wrote his papers on the "Literati," as he called the authors of his day, even he would not venture to say that no southern writer had any chance of succeeding at the north—simply because he was south-ern, you know—the fact being that the most popu-lar writers of teday, the most applauded and the best paid, are of southern origin, and southern to their heart's core. To mention the names of Cable, Page, Miss Muriree, Colonel Johnston and Mr. Joel Chandler Harris, is to settle the foolish question of northern prejudice against the south in letters. Why, we of the north are so sympathetic, so generous, in a certain sense, that we let ourselves be taken in by a good many southern impostors, in prose, in verse, and in the glowing scribble which is neither, bu simply rubbish. We are not, and were not, taken in by Mr. Hrris, whose "Uncle Remus" was one of the most curious contributions to folk-lore that the world has ever seen; whose stories, in dialect, or in good, manly English, are delightful, and whose last book, "Free Joe and Other Georg's Sketches," is a book that one wants to read over and over, recalling, at least to us, the judgment of JGray, who d sired nothing better than to lie all day on a sofa and read eternal new romances by Marivaux. There are five stories in this lasvolume of Mr. Harris-"Free Joe," "Little Compt to 1," "Aunt Fountain's Pris ner," "Trouble on that we have wept over them, and laughed over them, and that we find a unique quality in them that we find in no other S athern story-teller, we say—at least we hope we say—that Mr. Harris is a man of beautiful genius.

GOSSIP OF THE DAY.

A misleading practice of the society editors of the day, is to print the list of persons invited to a party, as the list of persons actually in attendance. This often leads to lamentable misunderstandings. A few months ago a lady whose grandfather w buried at noon found her name published as being buried at noon found ber name published as being present at a gorman the next night. A lady, whose mother was at the point of death, was mortified at seeing ber name printed as in attendance at a pariy the night before death actually came.

Those who are really present, of course, know that the list is incorrect, but the general public is often lead to blame for heartlessness those who are in fact at the bedside of loved ones, or at home in mourning and in sorrow. Dozens of cases might be morning and in sorrow. Dozens or at home in mourning and in sorrow. Dozens of cases might be cited—some of recent date. Let the lists of invited guests be discarded and the society columns graced only with the names of those actually present at the society events.

Governor Gordon has become interested in the Anthony shoals property in middle Georgia and will go to New York to develop it. He says it sur-passes the water power at Lowell, and can, he thinks, be made the nucleus of a great manufacturing city. There is a similar water power in Bartow county, with coal and iron in property

Governor Gordon is also interested in a Georg gia cattle ranch. He has purchased lands lying next to his Flint river plantation and with strong connec-tions in New York will equip it with several thousand cattle. There are vast stretches of grass and canelrake on the lands selected where beeves can be raised at nominal cost.

This new enterprise suggests that with cheap pasturage and open winters, every leading hotel in seorgia sends to New York for its tenderloins—and our butchers have fine meats shipped from Chicago or the east, and keeps it in ice-chests. The Thomas-ville and Florida hotels buy their butter from the north-much of their poultry from the same quarter. In spite of the fact that vegetables will grow in the open gir ten-months in the year, canned vegetables are imported by the gross for use in the Thomasville and Jacksonville hetels.

Why is it we cannot buy now the sweet, old fashloned country ham? Judge Samuel Lumpkin lately sent to the writer a baif-dozen from his priloke house, of the vintage of 1884, that are simply poems in ashes. Any self-respecting pig would have died gladly to have been so idealized. In these hams you catch the flavor of the smoke of the half-smothered oak chips, above which they drifted with the seasons into perfection. And the red gravy—excuse these droeling lips—clear, consistest. flavorous, it is such gravy as you used to find on your mother's table when you came home from a long day's hunt in the December wind. I had rather have a smoke-house with its loamy floor, its darkened rafters, its red-pepper pods, its festoons of sausage odorous of sage, and a hundred such hams suspended between earth and roof, like small Maohet-than a cellar of dust-begrimed bottles of Maderia of '22. Has the art of curing hams in the Georgia smoke-house become a lost one? Shall red gravy go, with Tyrian purple, into the realms of

The defeat of Colonel Hammond for the school board is creating considerable talk since his card was published yesterday. It is said that Colonel Hammond was defeated by the friends of Mr. Hote Smith, because he voted against Mr. Smith's father as principal of the Giris' High school. Touching this vote, Colonel Hammond said: "I voted against him simply because I did not believe and do not believe any man should be at the head of the Girls' High school. There are a hundred reasons, in my opinion, why a lady ought to be in charge of that school. When Mr. Smith offered for principal of the Ivy street school I voted for him. But I thought it was a mistake to put a man in Miss Mc-Kinley's place at the Girls' H gh school."

"Itald Governor Gordon the other day," said Dr. Westmoreland, principal physican to the penitentiary, "that he was the best bygienic gov-error Georgia ever had. His arraignment of the convict lessees and the subsequent fine of twenty five hundred dollars has done the camps more good han all the doctors that have been employed. Las week's reports showed less than ten men sick in a total of fifteen hundred and thirty. We shall have to call Governor Gordon Dr. Gordon if he improve ings much further.' It is well known that much of the improvem in the penitentiary is due to Dr. Westm admirable system as medical director and his organ "In a short time," Dr. Westmoreland went on to sav, "all the convicts will be owned by Gov-ernor Bown and the Charaboochee Brick com-pany. They bought the most of James's convicts on yesterday, and the whole force is gradually being centered in those two companies, The penitentiary will be more efficient, healthy, and more easily nanaged when consolidated into two companies than as it now stands,"

Acirs to Receive Property That has Long Been in Litigation.

Nashville, Tenn., December 10.—[Special.] Charles Courtensy, a railroad engineer of this city, has recently received information from his attorney in Dublin, Ireland, that the estate of Sir John Courtenay has at last been settled up, and is now waiting for the identification of heirs. Charles Courtenay has sent the official family records which he received from his father, and these were reported satisfactory and the property which is valued at factory and the property which is valued at something over $3,000,000, will be subject to the orders as soon as all the heirs can be found. the orders as soon as all the heirs can be found. Mr. Courtenay said there were eleven grand children of the late Sir John living in the United States, and they would probably meet here in February next. This estate has been in litigation since 1833, when Sir John Courtenay died, and their heirs were only recently found.

A NEGRO DESPERADO.

Henry Brown Beats His Wife and Tries to Murder Her and Another Woman. Yesterday morning the whole neighborhood near the house No. 140 Luckie street was aroused by screams of "Help! murder!" which emanated from the place. emanated from the place.

A colored woman, dripping with blood, rushed out into the street, and in another moment another woman ran out the yard. Both were terribly frightened and were screaming for help. They said that Henry Brown, a negro man, had tried to kill them with an ax.

Brown got mad with his wife Mattle, and upbraided her for being too intimate with another man. She repelled his accusations of infidelity, and swore that his charges were grossly unjust. This disclaimer did not appease his wrath and he waxed hotter and hotter.

pease his wrath and he waxed notter and hotter.

"I am going to give you a thrashing," he yelled, as he clutched her arm. He struck her in the face, and she tried to get away from him. Then he reached for a chair and she felt that her life was in danger. By a strong effort she shook him off and started to run, yelling as she went. She did not succeed in getting beyond the front door. Her husband seized her and dealt her several blows, one of which felled her to the earth.

A colored woman, named Lizzie Miller, ran to her aid and besought Brown to desist. Her pacificatory interference was of no avail; it only made him the madder.

"What in the devil have you got to do with it?" cried the infuriated men.

"What in the devi have you go it?" cried the infuriated men.
"It's a shame to treat a woman so, even if she is your wife, and you shan't do it while I'm about," exclaimed the plucky woman, reaching for a stick of wood.

"You be d—d," said Brown as he slashed her across the face, half stunning her.

About this time Matthe Brown recovered her consciousness and came to the assistance of the "I'll finish both of you," screamed Brown,

"I'll finish both of you," screamed Brown, as he picked up an ax. He struck a murder-ous blow at his wife, and had she not jumped to one side, it would undoubtedly have killed her. The blade just grazed her head, and slashed her arm open, making a painful and ugiy wound, which bled freely.

Bealizing that their lives were in peril. both women beat a hasty retreat and screamed as they ran. After reaching the street they continued to run, but the men with the ax did tinued to run, but the man with the ax did not pursue them. The women hurried toward the stationhouse and reported what had occurnot pursue them. The women hurried toward the stationhouse and reported what had occur-red. Both showed marks of violence, and Brown's wife seemed in a bad condition. Her arm was dressed by a physician, who discov-ered that the cut was much slighter than its bloody appearance indicated.

Two officers at once proceeded to the house, and when they arrived, their man had gone. Brown had taken with him all his clothes and his wife's clothes. Before taking his depar-ture, he had broken into fragments crockery ware, and wrenched furniture to pieces. He demolished the bed and played havoc generally. A scene of ruin met the officers' gaze, and they lost no time in following the fugitive. But their search was vain. Up to a late hour last night nothing was heard of him.

A warrant has been taken out by the two women against Henry Brown for assault and DEATH OF MAJOR BRUFFEY. The End Came Yesterday-Short Sketch of a Christian Life.

Major J. N. Bruffey died at his home on the Boulevard yesterday early morning.

A life characterized by upright and honorable dealings with his fellowmen, by thorough integrity, by pure, unostentatious Christianity was at an end; the life with the blessed Master had begun. the life with the blessed Master had begun.

His life was that of a man and a Christian. Born in Rockingham county. Va., his early life was spent at the home of his fathers. When quite a young man he graduated at a medical college in Philadelphia, but instead of beginning at once the practice of his profession, he accepted a responsible position in one of the departments of the government and went to that portion of Missuri which is now Indian Territory. Here he remained with his wife and little family until the breaking out of the war, when he entered the service of the confederate states. He sent his family back to his old bome in Virginia, while he himself entered active service as a member of Price's staff. During the greater part of the great struggle he was on the medical staff, where his knowle ige of medicines and surgery made his services peculiarly valuable.

At the close of the war he joined his family in Virginia. While in the west he had accommisted considerable property in both Missouri and Virginia. For a time he was in partnership with Hon.
J. M. Newman, judge of the United States court. In Si-4, ke, with several friends, went on the bond of the sheriff of the county in which he hved, and the defalcation of that officer swept away the property of all his bondsmen.

defalcation of that officer swept away the property of all his bondsmen.

After this the family came to Georgia. Mrs. Bruffey had property in Spalding county, and for a time they lived there, moving subsequently to Atlanta. Here Major Bruffey entered the service of Longley & Co., and has been the confidential bookkeeper through the different changes in the firm up to the time of his death. He was an expert accountant and the possessor of business qualities which made his services very valuable to his employers.

Major Bruffey was a consistent member of the Presbyterian church, one who carried his religion Presbyterian church, one who carried his religion into his life. For years neither he nor his wife had missed a service at the church they attended.

On Tuesday eventing he was stricken with paralysis. From the time that he was prostrated by the attack to his death he was unconscious, and the end was peaceful.

was peaceful. He leaves a wife and three children—Mrs. Laura V. Trent, Mr. G. T. Bruffey and Mr. E. C. Bruffey— V. Trent, Mr. G. T. Brufley and Mr. E. C. Brufley—to mourn his loss.

At half past six o'clock this—morning short services will be held at the family residence, Rev. T. P. Cleveland officiating. It was the wish of Major Brufley that he be buried with his father, mother, brothers and sisters in Rockingham county, Virginla, and at 7:40 the remains will be taken to Harrisonburg for burial, Mrs. Brufley, Mr. and Mrs. Trent, Mr. E. C. Brufley and Mr. Giles Devere will accompany the remains to Harrisonburg where the interment will take place.

TOO YOUNG TO BE A SOLDIER. Ben Christle is Released on a Writ of Ha

Funeral of the Late William Moore Lowry Yesterday.

THE EXERCISES AT THE CHURCH. nching Tribute to the Character of Colonel

Lowry by Rev. E. H. Barnett-The Interment at Oakland. The First Presbyterian church contained yesterday morning at 11 o'clock a congregation of representative men and women of Atlanta, all assembled with saddened hearts to pay the last tribute of respect to one whom all loved and revered—William M. Lowry. The stained glass shut out the light of the outside world, the light that attended from chandellers.

Among the divines present were: the venerable and venerated Rev. John Jones, D. D., Rev. G. B. Strickler, Rev. J. H. Alexander, Rev. T. P. Cleveland, Rev. H. C. McDenaid, Rev. H. W. Hilliard and Rev. E. H. Barnett. As the casket containing the casket that once enshrined the soul of the honored dead was brought in by the pall bearers, Messrs. T. Langston, H. T. Inman, G. B. McGaughey, T. M. Clarke, H. W. Grady, Paul Romere, T. H. Witliams, J. G. Oglesby, G. W. Parrott, R. M. Farrar and W. W. Boyd, the organ sounded a selection diver. The second R. M. Farrar and W. W. Boyd, the organ sounded a solemn dirge. The escort consisting of Judges John Erskine and W. T. Newman, Messrs. W. Markham, T. G. Healey, J. H. Mecaslin, J. R. Wylie, S. B. Hoyt, S. M. Inman, W. A. Moore, W. A. Povell, J. W. Rucker, H. T. Phillips, C. Harmsen, David Mayer, Dr. J. G. Earnest and others filed in and to k seats.

The choir sang "Rock of Ages."
Rev. G. B. Strickler, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, "ead to 3rd Pralm and a selection from the 15th chapter of first Corintians.

Prayer was offered by Rev. John Jones, after which the choir sang "Nearer My God arter which the choir sang "Nearer My God to Thee."

Rev. E. H. Barnett, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, selected as the back of his remarks the words contained in the 21st verse of the first chapter of the Epistle to the Phillippians: "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain."

Dr. Barnett said: "Paul was not live of living. He loved his friends and lived."

living. He loved his friends and he had many. This epistle shows the warm beating of his heart. He was not tired of his work, for he leved to preach the gospel. He did not think the world was too bad to live in. The reason that he nitiared the words of the text was that death was to him a gain personally. There are many considerations to the Christian why death is a gain to him.

"Death is the end of all pain. Paul had a body full of weakness and weariness, a thorn in the flesh, and was environed with perils by sea and by land. God will wipe all our tears. When we lay this casket, this tabernacle of flesh down, there will be no more tears or pain. Is that not a gain? We thread the paths of earth in an atmosphere of servey and of sufearth in an atmosphere of sorrow and of suf-fering. When we lay the body down, we are earth in an atmosphere of the fering. When we lay the body down, we are forever removed from that atmosphere. Is that not a great gain? Death will be an increase of our intellectual powers. Now we see as in a glass darkly; then we shall know as we are known. There are a great many problems in life and vexations of spirit. At best our knowledge is imperfect and we are mable to understand. When we are free from the body we shall gain this knowledge, and ow intentively, perfectly and immediately.

"Death frees the soul from all trammels and from sin. Heaven, with its streets of gold, its jasper walls and its pearly gates, is a beautiful place to children; heaven is a beautiful place to the worn Christian where he can lay down his burden of sorrows, and rest and remain with the people of God. To the Christian the beauty of heaven is its holiness and purity. Nothing unclean can enter there. Girt about with God's presence and grace, no sinful thought no unbolk purposes are insured desired. thought, no unholy purpose, no impure desire will ever assail the Clr stien, for they will be are and holy as God is pure and holy. Is not that a great gain?

"At one bound the Christian passes into the presence of God. Is it not a gain to come into companionship with all God's people and our own loved ones that have gone before?

'A man who dies at three score has more friends in heaven than on earth; more throngs to meet him at the gates of heaven than those that assemble on earth to pay respect to his remains. You men with gray hairs whom I see gathered here today, you have more friends in heaven than you have on earth—friends of on your youth, of your riper manhood, and your old age. Is it not a gain to be with God, to be in fellowship and the highest possible communion with him? Here, on earth, as we attempt to commune with God, our thoughts w. nder; but in heaven we sl. a.l have full, free, unlimited fellowship with Him Death is a gain to the man who lives in and for Christ. We have come to-day to pay tribute to the memory of one who was an ted, by close and tender ties to the church. Life had for W. M. Lowry many attractions. He enjoyed his work, both in his business and in the church. He was no pessimist. He had pleasure and happiness on earth, and yet to him "to die is gain." I will attempt no elaborate analysis of his character. Lowelt to be among the is gain." I will attempt no elaborate afflysis of his character. I ought to be among the mourners. If I ever had an earthly friend it was W. M. Lowry. He was always cheeful, bright and happy. He lived in the past a great deal, yet he never grew old. He loved little children. He was the personification of gentleness—so gentle that he was like a tender woman. He was a delightful companion, and carried a beam of sunshine into every circle around him.

Around him.

His devotion to his friends was marked, unsellish and untiring. This was specially true of him to those who were nearest to him. As a father and husband, he was indulgent, kind and loving. He labored faithfully to push forward his friends. Descended from Schotchrish Presbyterians of Virginia, he inherited all their staunch, unwavering integrity. But over all, and controlling all his charac cristics, was his piety and consecretion. He was devoted to the church and her ordinances, always in his place in the sanctuary, and loved to sing the songs of Zion. Even in his last moments he talked about the church. He was devoted to the church and the pastor.

"We were together three or four days at the presbytery. He told me that he had passed his three-score years and had but a few days to live, and he tried each day to live as if that day was his last, so that when the Master came he could say: 'Here am I.'

"Little did I think last Sunday when I saw him in his pew that I should preach my last coment. His devotion to his friends was marked, nn-came he could say: 'Here am I.'

"Little did I think last Sunday when I saw him in his pew that I should preach my last sermon (to him. He was active and carnest, yet God took him; for him to die was gain, unspeakable gain. We can rejoice to see him with the crown of glory, his heart filled with love, his life pervaded of the presence of God. You know that you have a parent that has passed to the skies, and that is the grandest glory man can haw. I would rather have it than the grandest crown of earth.

"The trustees and board of this church have lost another prop on whom we all leaned. There are many greyhaired men in this assemblage. Areyou as ready to die as he was? Is it 'for you to live, is Christ, to die is gain?' "Intrough his influence, I am here as pastor. His heart beat in sympathy with mine all the time. I have lost a friend on earth, but have a friend in heaven. I feel that when I enter the pearly gates I shall be greeted by his genial, pleasant, loving face. Time is but a little thing compared with eternity. Life on earth is a small thing compared with eternal life, our lives linked with Christ."

Rev. M. H. Barnett offered a prayer and the choir sang "Safe in the Arms of Jesus."

The casket was profusely covered with floral offerings. The congregation retired from the church to the carriages, and the cortege was one of the largest seen in Atlants for many years. The remains were interred in Oakland cemetery, and all that was mortal of William

Death of Mr. J. M. Davis.

Mr. J. M. Davis, who was formerly connected with the Richmond and Danville railroad as chief clerk in the freight department here, died December 9th, at Orlando, Florida, at 7:15 p. m. He went to Florida in October, at the suggestion of his physician, as a last resort for his lung trouble. He segmed to improve, and his family were preparing to leave Atlanta to join him in the land of flowers. The household goods were already at the depot for shipment when the sad news by telegraph reached his wife that he was dead.

The remains have been orderedishipped to Greenville, S. C., for interment in cemetry where his relatives lie buried.

Mr. Davis was a the congh Christian, beloved and respected by all who knew him, and his many arm friends will be pained to hear of his death.

Dr. Barnett said: "Paul was not tired of ving. He loved his friends and he had bany. This epistle shows the warm beating this heart. He was not tired of his work, or he leved to preach the gospel. He did not hink the world was too bad to live in. I have the text was that death was too im a gain personally. There are many consecrations to the Christian why death is a gain o him.

Death is the end of all pain. Paul had a yfull of weakness and weariness, a thorn dy full of weakness and weariness, a thorn the flesh, and was environed with perils by a and by land. God will wipe all our tears, hen we lay this casket, this tabernacle of sh down, there will be no more tears or pain, that not a gain? We thread the raths of the in an atmosphere of sorrow and of sufting. When we lay the body down, we are rever removed from that atmosphere. Is at not a great gain? Death will be an incace of our in ellectual powers. Now we as in a glass darkly, then we shall know as a rare known. There are a great many oblems in life and vexations of spirit. At stour knowledge is imperfect and we are able to understand. When we are free from the body we shall gain this knowledge, and ow intentively, perfectly and immediately. Death frees the soul from all tranmels and wen sin. Heaven, with its streets of gold, its per walls and its pearly gates, is a beautiful om sin. Heaven, with its streets of gold, its per walls and its pearly gates, is a beautiful oce to children; heaven is a beautiful place the worn Christian where he can lay down burden of sorrows, and rest and remain that the people of God. To the Christian the acty of heaven is its holiness and purity, thing unclean can enter there. Girt about h God's presence and grace, no sinful night, no unholy purpose, no impure desired ever a said the Cir stirn, for they will be eard holy as God is pure and holy. Is not to a great gain?

will ever assall the CFF sti. n. for they will be pure and holy as God is pure and holy. Is not that a great gain?

"At one bound the Christian passes into the presence of God. Is it not a gain to come into companionship with all God's people and our own loved ones that have gone before?

"A man who dies at three score has more friends in heaven than en earth; more throngs to meet him at the gates of heaven than those that assemble on earth to pay respect to his remains. You men with gray hairs whom I see gathered here today, you have more friends in heaven than you have on earth—friends of your youth, of your riper manhood, and your oid age. Is it not a gain to be with God, to be in fellowship and the highest possible communion with him? Here, on earth, as we attempt to commune with God, our thoughts we nder; but in heaven we sla I have full, free, unlimited fellowship with Him."

Death is a gain to the man who lives in and for Christ. We have come to-day to pay tribute to the memory of one who was united, by close and tender ties to the church. Life had for W. M. Lowry many attractions. He enjoyed his work, both in his business and in the or W. M. Lowry many attractions. He enoyed his work, both in his business and in the hurch. He was no pessimist. He had pleasure and happiness on earth, and yet to him "to die s gain." I will attempt no elaborate and ysis f his character. I ought to be among the nourners. If I ever had an earthly friend it vas W. M. Lowry. He was always cheerful, wright and happy. He lived in the past a great leat, yet he never grew old. He loved little children. He was the personification of genleuess—so gentle that he was like a tender woman. He was a delightful companion, and carried a beam of sunshine into every circle cround him. 1. Lowry many attractions. He s devotion to his friends was marked, un-ried a beam of sunsime into every circle and him.

Its devotion to his friends was marked, unlish and untiring. This was specially true of to those who were nearest to him. As a ber and husband, he was indulgent, kind cloving. He labored faithfully to push ward his friends. Descended from Schotch-hi Presbyterians of Virginia, he inherited their staunch, unwavering integrity. But r all, and controlling all his charac cristics, this piety and consecretion. He was deed to the church and her ordinances, always in his place in the sanctuary, and loved ding the songs of Zion. Even in his last ments he talked about the church. He devoted to the church and the pastor.

We were together three or four days at the obytery. He told me that he had passed three-score years and had but a few days ive, and he tried each day to live as if that was his last, so that when the Master he he could say: 'Here am I.'

Little did I think last Sunday when I saw in his pew that I should preach my last mon ito him. He was active and earnest, God took him; for him to die was gain, peakable gain. We can rejoice to see him athe crown of glory, his heart filled with his life pervaded of the presence of God-know that you have a parent that has sol to the skies, and that is the grandest yman can haw. I would rather have it the grandest crown of earth.

The trustees and board of this church have another prop on whom we all leaned, are are many greyhaired men in this assemble. Areyou as ready to die as he was? Is or you to live, is Christ, to die is gain?'' Through his induence, I am here as pastor, heart beat in sympathy with mine ali the c. I have lost a friend on earth, but have send in heaven. I feel that when I enter pearly gates I shall be greeted by his gepleasant, loving face. Time is but a little size compared with eternity. Life on earth small thing compared with cternal life, lives linked with Christ.'' which is unsurpassed by any house in the city, and which presents a most inviting assortment of the latest and most exquisite designs, and affords a selection for those seeking Holiday offerings at about HALF PRICE asked elsewhere, which cannot be excelled in quality, style or beauty. To all those who

AVE a desire to procure the best goods for the least money in any of our numerous departments, we extend a most cordial invitation to visit our store at any time, assuring old and young, great and small, rich and poor, that they will receive courteous treatment and be handsomely repaid

VERY time they come. The great beauty of trading with us is, that you are enabled to purchase at one place nearly everything you want, and the best or the better part of it all is, you can save from $35 to $50 on every $100 worth of goods purchased. Now, before we go any further, we must not forget to emphasize the fact that our stock of spectacles and eyeglasses is complete, and embraces the finest lenses in gold, silver and nickel and steel frames, and that we ask no fancy prices. Our crockery and glassware department

RESENTS the newest designs in decorated sets and plain and fancy wares, and in children's toy sets, we have a nice assortment CHEAP. It will pay every housekeeper in Atlanta and surrounding country to buy their crockery, china and glassware of us, as we bought in large lots and got the inside track on prices. However, we are satisfied that you

OOK around, for in so doing you will be convinced of what we claim. Now that the festive season is at hand, everybody will want a carver, and there are a great many who will not be able to think of anything more : u'table for Christmas presentation. Therefore, we invite special attention to our cutlery department, and, by the way, we don't want anybody to forget that we have a pretty line of pocket-knives. In ▲ TTEMPTING to lay before the public in one advertisement, even though it be quite an extensive one, such a gigantic stock and varied assortment of goods, it is impossible to even Wood's ad. in 10 cent bring into notice thousands of articles which are useful, ornamental and desirable for many purposes. Therefore, we respectfully request our friends, and their friends, and their friends' friends and everybody

ALL and see for themselves the im-1mense stock of novelties, which is larger and far superior to any other concern in the city. Our stationery department is a special feature of the business, and the person who cannot be suited here must be hard to please. In this department we have a fine line of photograph and autograph albums, scrapbooks, Christmas and New Year cards, etc. Have you seen our plush goods? If not, come at your ARLIEST opportunity. We have a magnificent stock. Seeing is believing. And, oh! what are we going to do with our mammoth stock of Dolls and Toys? They must be sold, and all who want bargains had better come quickly and get the pick.

So, let everybody come to "The Place" for everything, and they will not be disappointed, for a larger and finer assortment of goods was never presented to the people of Atlanta.

Their Size and Value. It seldom occurs to any one what immense values lie dormant in private hands, but when the fact is remembered that there is scarcely a home where jewels of one sort or another are not to be found, the subject assumes an importance which it may seem to lack at first sight.

portance which it may seem to lack at first sight.

In times of revolution and political trouble jewels from their extreme portability have always risen in price, and even in times of momentary stringency those who deal in gemis experience an increased demand. For at such periods people are looking for property in which investments can be made without risk, and there is, perhaps, nothing that will yield its original cost so surely as a well bought diamond.

A reporter of The Constitution on yester-day was ruminating upon these matters, and with a view of establishing the value of the five karat gem which reposes upon his peaceful bosom, stepped into a large establishment and was met by one of the proprietors.

"Who owns the largest diamond in the world?"

"The czar of Russia has the "Orloff Diamond,"which is one of the largest in the world; its weight is 103 carats and valued at $400,000."

"Mention some of the other historical gems." A reporter of THE CONSTITUTION on yester-

"Mention some of the other historical gems."

"The 'Koh-i-nor,' which is owned by the queen of England, weighs 123 carats and is worth $700,000. The 'Star of the South,' property of the emperor of Brazil, weighs 125 karats. The 'Regent,' which is the property of France weighs 137 karats, is worth $648,000, and there are a number of others weighing from 40 to 90 carats each.

I suppose a 2 carat stone is worth twice as much as a 1 karat stone.

"The rule works altogether differently my friend. Take for instance a one carat stone of good quality worth say $125, a three carat stone of the same quality would be worth perhaps $650."

What qualifies the value of a diamond?

"Its size, shape, color and freeness from flaws."

Is a knowledge of diamonds easily acquired?
"So far as the judging whether a stone is genuine or not, is soon understood, but to determine their comparative value requires almost a lifetime of study and experience."

After looking through an immense display of selected loose stones, our reporter took leave, and for the information given we must thank Messrs. J. P. Stevens & Bro., the enterprising jewelers, who have recently made such a display of gems that their store is one of the sights of Atlanta.

From the Mobile Register, December 7.

Messrs. H. A. & O. C. Fuller, formerly and for many years wholesale grocers, of Atlanta, have opened a steamship line from here to Tampa and Manatee river, thirty miles below Tampa. They have made their first trip on this line, and Mr. H. A. Fuller, who is manager, is delighted with the result, and the future prospect. He says the success of the enterprise is assured beyond all question, because of the fact that his son's business at Tampa and Manatee will furnish a full cargo down and back almost the whole year. His son has been merchandising there several years, and has built up a large trade in grain and 'produce, and is a large orange buyer. Their steamer, "Cumberland," carried down, last week, 100 tons of freight, and returned yesterday with 116 tons, or twenty-nine hundred boxes of oranges and some vegetables, making a handsome earning for the steamer.

Mr. Fuller says on Manatee river there are large bodies of rich hammook lands which produce fine vegetables without fertilizing, and that they put vegetables into the market from them two months earlier than we can and where they bring finney prices. That business there is just in its Infancy, but last season they shipped thousands of crates the business is increasing right along, and is much more prefitable than growing oranges, though he says growing oranges on suitable ground rays much better than most people think. Mr. Fuller expects to work up sufficient business is support two steamers by next winter, and intends to have another and larger beat built next summer. The Cumberland is comparatively new; was built in 1852 and has been completely overhanded this summer, and put in good condition every way, and is now classed A 1 for five years by the American Shipmaster's association, of New York. She has good and comfortable accommodations for thirty-five passengers; will make weekly trips, leaving here the first part of every week. Mr. Fuller will arrange and publish her schedule this week. He hopes to, and should d

THE WORLD OF SPORT.

The Great Wrestling Match at Concordia Hall.

THE SOUTHERN BASE BALL LEAGUE, And Atlanta's Prospects of Having a Club The Minor Leagues and the National Agreement.

It is a difficult matter to convince some peo-ple that all those connected with games or exple that all those connected with games or exhibitions of skill and strength are not rogues, thieves, or, in a plain expression, toughs; and the sooner such ideas are dispelled the better it will be for the health and happiness of the community at large. Exercise is conducive of health, and health is happiness.

Athletic sport, like anything else, can be advanced or it can become degenerate. "Man become degraded were he deprived of activity or exercise. It is a well known fact that the ancients devoted as much time to physical as to mental culture, and the schools and colleges to mental culture, and the schools and colleges of today are recognizing the benefits of the gymnasium more than ever before.

Mr. D. A. Sargent, M. D., in Scribner's July number, in a very able article on "The Physical Proportion of the Typical Man," says: "At no time in the history of our country has more attention been given to the subject of physical training than is given to it at the present day;" and again in the November number he gives an excellent treatise on the physical characteristics of the athlete, in which he goes into detail on the merits of wrestling as an exercise.

The above is a good likeness of John

The above is a good likeness of John Muhler, the Greek wrestler and athlete. Tomorrow nightly will meet in a catch-as-catch-can wrestling match Mr. Dennis O'Leary, a well-known athlete about town, and Mr. Dougherty, a Stone Mountain stone-cutter, who is known as Hercules. The agreements are that Mr. Muhler will throw each of his opponents four times in two hours. If he fails to do so or should either of them throw him once, Mr. Muhler forfeits the sum of $100. Two shoulders and one hip, or two hips and one shoulder will constitute a fall. The contest will take place at Concordia hall. The stage will be covered with sawdust to the depth of several inches, over which a tarpaulin will be spread so that there willibe no danger of any one getting hurt.

there willipbe no danger of any children hurt.

Besides the meeting of the mighty men, there will also be an amateur wrestling and two or three sparring matches between well known local admirers of fistic fun. The hall will no doubt be packed, as everybody is anxious to see a contest where science and strength will be brought face to fage.

Muhler has met and conquered such wrest-lers as Duncan Ross, James Faulkner, Tom Cannon, Jack Connors, "the Jap," Lucien Marc Cristol, Edward Bibby, Joe Acton, Greek George and others. A match between him and Muldoon is a probability.

The recent meeting of the directors of the Southern league did a good deal toward revivifying the baseball spirit in Atlanta. The directors did a wise thing in refusing to admit the New Orleans opposition club, and the matter has been settled in a way which ought to satisfy everybody. The necessity of having eight clubs in the league is apparent, but Atlanta had no sympathy with four or five clubs in New Orleans.

But that has been settled and there is no But that has been settled and there is no use in arguing it further. The clubs now in the league are pushing ahead with their work of organization. Birmingham has Goldsby as manager, Gibson. Burks, Duffee, Shubert, Tom Sullivan and John Patrick Cahill. Charleston has Glenn, Carl, Williams, Nicholas, Childs, Strief, Peck, Voss, Brown, Behan, and Powell. New Orleans and Memphis have got nines including many of last year's nines. These four clubs are all right. How about the other four? They want Atlanta, Nashville, Chattanooga and Mobile. Nashville and Mobile promise to come in with clubs. Chattanooga is waiting for Atlanta.

Since Monday's meeting the matter has been canvassed somewhat in Atlanta. It is too early to say anything about prospects, but the question of "club or no club" will doubt-less be decided this week.

less be decided this week.

Atlanta should have a club by all means.

The meeting of the national agreement at Cincinnati, resulted in the admission of the minor leagues—the southern league included—to the privileges they have heretofore had. Each association must pay $50 as annual dues, and $2,000 for the right preservation. The American association re-elected Wheeler C. Wikoff president and secretary, and wound up its meeting with a grand banquet.

ATHENS TO KNOXVILLE

Judge Thomas' Mission to New

SAID TO BE BACKED BY JOHN H. INMAN rudge Thomas Says the Road Will be Fushed Through Gossip of the Nation-al Capital Congressional, Etc.

WASHINGTON, December 11.—[Special.]—The three days recess that congress has gives to the country has not been the means of adding much to the information of the people A great many of the members have taken advantage of the occasion to pay short trips of Boston and New York, and there is more of these greating connected with some of these visit.

Boston and New York, and there is more of less gossip connected with some of these visit about the hotels tonight.

Judge Bailey Thomas, of Athenf, and M. George D. Thomas, of the same place, were very pleasant smile when they passed throug Washington a few days ago. Like most rair road men they were very reticent, but after their departure, I found out several matters, interest connected with their movements. interest connected with their movement.

There is no reason in the world to doubt it success of Judge Baily Thoma's railroad enter prise through to Knoxville, as I was told night, it will certainly be built, for there ected with it, not one man who will thre anything unfavorable nround it. John H. I man, of New York, is talked of everywher as Judge Thomas's backer in the matter, a the well informed even go so far as to say the much of Judge Thomas's trouble, heretofore would have been obviated had his backer beet

The curious part of the matter is that while the Richmond and Danville road ostensibly sells to Thomas the upper end of the Northeast ern, they sell through him to one of their mos prominent and influential directors the same holding. It is said that the connection Thom proposes to build has long been the desire of Mr. Inman, and would have long sin been consummated had he been in conti the board. But the controlling voice in the management has been opposed to the mountil now, but now that Inman seems to be until now, but now that Inman seems to be the position to be in power, backed by t Knoxville interest, which was his old hom it is very likely that on Judge Thomas's turn he will be accompanied by enough mone turn he will be accompanied by enough mone to get through the enterprise. And the back ing he has had all the while is the same back ing he has today, and it transpires that the young Athens manipulator has been the ma-ter, more or less, of the situation ever since has been interested in it has been interested in it.

Talking with him last night, I asked him what he proposed to do, and the reply he game was: "I intend to put through the roam notwithstanding everything that has been said," and subsequent events have shown the Hon. H. H. Carlton would have occupied the same resilient today that Judge Thomas desired. has been interested in it. same position today that Judge Thomas do had it not been for his election for congress. ms that he was trusted with the same m sion that Bailey Thomas has carried on to successful conclusion, and only gave it is when he was called upon to accept congress ional honors.

The prominence I give the matter in the dispatch is due to the general effect the rese of Judge Thomas's success will have upon the morthern section of the state. It is certain that in a very few months there will be a worm connection by way of Athens that we contribute a great deal to the importance the state, and that the connection seems to dieate that the object in view is a move give Knoxville, the old stamping ground Mr. Inman, a fairer fighting ground on the Georgia coast than it has heretofore had, any rate, such is the talk and such are the prophesies that one can hear readily about the state of th

Little besides the introduction of bis likely to occur during the remainder of tweek in the open session of the senate. The resident has before him three hundred a sixty-five messages, nominating postmase alone, all of whom have been appointed ding the recess of congress and are already office which messages he will send to the sense first as he can examine and sign them. Our recess nominations, sufficient to bring the naber up to about six hundred are expected ding the week. Daily secret sessions are like to occur for the purpose of reading and refting these, and it is possible that some of cabinet nominations already so the senate, but not yet laid before the bomay be reported for action before the end the week. All important committees whold meetings during the week for the pose of organization. The daily sessiof the senate are likely to be short ones. Staitings and long adjournments may be pected in the house. The speaker will apper the committee on rules within a day or tand a recess for two days will probably taken in order to allow that committee an portunity to consider and report upon the rious propositions that have already been troduced looking to amendments of the for rules. Mr. McCreary's resolution requiremental appropriation bills to be reported the house by committees within sixty dafter their appointment during the long ston, will probably be speedily and favora reported by the committee on rules, and discussion following the report may constitute time of the house for a day or two. This also talk of an aggressive movement by friends of some of the house officials recut displaced, which may enliven the proceeding the latter part of the week.

A caucus of democrats will be held here morrow morning at 10 o'clock for the pur of taking action on the report of the cat committee relative to minority represent on committees of the senate. Following correct list of senators who will represent democratio party on the committees nan except that one or tw order. Little besides the introduction of b
